'Near-anarchy' shuts Harmac

Times News Services

Irate forest industry tradesmen from three unions were off the job Friday at some British Columbia sawmills, plywood mills and pulp mills to press their demands for higher wage revisions.

At MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac pulp mill, the 24-hour study session turned into a full-scale walkout.

Brian Smith, the company's industrial relations officer, said "a mixture of dissident employees" set up an information picket line Friday afternoon when they discovered that company supervisors had replaced tradesmen involved in the study session.

Workers scheduled for the afternoon shift did not show up for work and the company began shutting down the plant, Smith said.

"The information picket line has no sanction and we were almost in a situation of anarchy," he said.

Stan Shewaga, president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers (PPWC), Local 8, said the members who set up the picket line were acting on their own accord, but the union executive will attempt to resolve the dispute.

"The principal thing is that supervisors are not going to take jobs that belong to hourly paid workers," he said.

Smith said, however, that Harmac had "no option but to perform essential maintenance jobs to prevent layoff of production employees."

The irate PPWC tradesmen joined tradesmen from the International Woodworkers of America and the Canadian Paperworkers Union in walking off the job at mills along the coast and in the Interior as far north as Prince George.

The shutdown at Harmac, which will idle 1,500 workers, comes only seven days after the plant reopened following a three-week strike by the PPWC.

Little boy lost . . . and found

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

He was a cute little kid, even through the smudged dirt on his face. He was crying and the man walking out of the restaurant after his Friday lunch just couldn't pass the waif by.

He asked the youngster where he lived, and together they set off in one indicated direction. Four blocks down, the boy decided he didn't live that way after all.

Back to square one, which in this case was the James Bay Square at Menzies and Simcoe.

A few false starts and several blocks of walking later and rescuer and lost boy found themselves in Tex's Grill, a neighborhood restaurant tucked in behind the Legislative Buildings at Menzies and Superior.

Owner Russ Kraft agreed with the rescuer that the police should be called, but he thought an ice cream cone might be in order beforehand. Lost boy agreed, but he didn't talk at all. He just sat and nodded, especially when anyone said ice cream (left) or chips.

Then Constable Bob Stiff arrived, and seconds later the boy was being put in the front seat of the police cruiser. The lost boy didn't like that one bit. He scrambled from the car and threw himself into the arms of the man who had found him (right).

Stiff asked the rescuer for his name.

"Terry Segarty," the man replied.

Occupation?

"I'm an MLA," replied the Socred member for Kootenay.

And so, although he had to get to Qualicum to pick up his son, and despite the fact he was facing a 12-hour drive back to Cranbrook, the MLA gathered the boy in his arms and they went for a ride in the cruiser.

It was one of those fair days when fortune smiled on lost boys and MLAs and busy policemen. A woman at James Bay Square recognized the boy and knew where he lived.

Minutes later, Yarrow, three years old and no longer a lost little boy, was in the arms of his mother, Jan Christie. She had thought the boy was playing with his sister, Jennie, 7, in the back of the family's apartment at 132 Menzies. But when Jennie came in for lunch, Yarrow had decided to go off and see a bit of the world.

After all, a boy never knows what important people he'll run into or what people will give him — especially if he's a cute little kid.

Ferry union votes strike

Times News Services

While bus drivers, fishermen and oil truckers are settling contract disputes, one group of workers is threatening to inconvenience everyone on Vancouver Island.

B.C. ferry workers have voted in favor of a strike.

However, no job action will be taken by the 26-member union while negotiations with the B.C. Ferry Corp. continue with the assistance of mediator Fred Geddes, union president Shirley Mathieson said Friday. Talks are scheduled to resume Monday.

Mathieson said the central issue is wages.

A lengthy ferry strike during the summer months would seriously harm B.C.'s tourist industry, and the provincial government would probably have to consider using its essential services legislation to order the workers back on the job.

The ferry corporation has had a tough time this month with fuel supplies running low after a Teamsters strike at three B.C. refineries cut deliveries of diesel fuel.

But Teamsters have reached tentative agreement with Imperial Oil, which expects to resume full deliveries next week.

Contract talks are continuing at the other two struck oil companies, Chevron Canada and Gulf Oil.

Meanwhile, B.C. Hydro's 3,000 bus drivers, mechanics and maintenance personnel in Vancouver and Victoria have voted 73 per cent in favor of accepting a two-year contract.

The contract, retroactive to April 1, will provide for wage increases of 15 per cent.

Al Ashton, Amalgamated Transit Union president, said the increase will raise a bus drivers's pay to $11.37 an hour as of April 1, 1981, and a mechanic's wage to $13.48 an hour.

And in the fishing industry, B.C.'s 4,000 shoreworkers, represented by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, have voted by a 2-to-1 margin to accept the tentative contract agreement hammered out last weekend.

Senior servants move on

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four senior civil servants under the British Columbia government's consumer and corporate affairs ministry have resigned or have been moved to new positions.

Bill Irwin, the province's senior administrator of securities, real estate and insurance is taking early retirement from his government job to join the Vancouver Stock Exchange as executive assistant to president Robert Scott, effective Oct. 1.

Other senior civil servants who have left the ministry include Keith Saddlemyer, assistant deputy minister who will join the treasury board in Victoria; Ken Stevenson, who will become head of the Saskatchewan Securities Commission, and Don Anderson, deputy superintendent of brokers who will move to another department.

Some sources have suggested the moves were made because of internal problems in the ministry and the appointment of former RCMP administrator Peter Bazowski as deputy minister.

However, Jim Nielsen, consumer and corporate affairs minister, said the four are simply moving to better jobs and it is mere coincidence that they are all leaving at the same time.

Tug crews find fortune afloat

ABERDEEN, Scotland (CP) — Fifteen crew members serving three Scottish tugs may have salvaged themselves a fortune by taking under tow an abandoned vessel loaded with 28,000 tons of Canadian iron ore.

They believe their share of the payout from this operation could be as much as £2 million ($5 million Canadian.)

A British Admiralty official says that the crew of the Liberian-registered Vida abandoned ship off the north of Scotland during thick fog.

While the 26 Spanish sailors from the Vida were taken to the mainland by lifeboats, three tugs from Scapa Flow in the Orkney Islands took the drifting vessel into tow.

Pressure to ban fishermen from key ferry channels

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The B.C. Ferries Corporation will ask the provincial government to pressure federal officials into restricting small fishing boats from using both Active Pass and Horseshoe Bay.

A source within the corporation told the Times today the boats at both locations have always been a matter of grave concern. The grounding of the Queen of Alberni on a reef in Active Pass Thursday has finally tipped the scales in favor of demanding action.

He noted that under the Canada Shipping Act, the federal ministry of transport can restrict or ban fishing at locations that are deemed hazardous to shipping routes.

Although a preliminary investigation into the cause of the mishap hasn't been completed, corporation officials have indicated the small fishing boats were a factor.

The preliminary findings are expected to be made public early next week, but much depends on the outcome of a transport ministry investigation which is being carried out separately.

The placing of a ban would undoubtedly generate a wave of protest from boaters who regard the pass and the bay as prime salmon fishing spots.

But some boaters, such as Horst Klein of North Pender Island suggest the government may have no other choice.

"You'll always get some guy who thinks the ferry can react in the same way as his little boat can," said Klein.

He said restricting fishing may be the answer but the only reason for taking that action is the lack of tough enforcement to get boaters to observe shipping rules.

"The RCMP has boats out there but I don't think they are tough enough. If it was me I'd fine the guy $500 if he didn't move over when a ferry came through. And if he was caught doing it again, I'd lock him up."

Meanwhile, the Alberni arrived at the Burrard-Yarrows drydock in North Vancouver around midnight, partly under tow and partly under its own steam.

Petro-Can fate hangs on studies

OTTAWA (CP) — Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn said Friday the Conservative government won't decide whether to sell Petro-Canada until it hears from a board of trustees being appointed to study the state-owned oil company.

"Unless the trustees recommend otherwise, Petro-Canada will continue to conduct business as usual," Hnatyshyn said in an interview from Saskatoon.

Hnatyshyn stressed that this represents no policy change from the party's election campaign pledge to sell the Crown corporation. But it appeared to indicate at least a subtle shift.

Prime Minister Clark labelled the multi-million-dollar company "a turkey" during the May 22 election campaign and said a Conservative government would sell it to the private sector.

At an April 25 campaign news conference in Toronto Clark reiterated his pledge and announced that a board of trustees would be appointed to examine the company and recommend to cabinet how to dispose of it.

"To suggest our policy is to sell Petro-Canada misses the whole point," the energy minister said. The recommendations of the board of trustees, which has yet to be appointed, would be considered before a decision is made on Petro-Canada's future.

There would probably be no decision until the end of the year, he said.

Former prime minister Pierre Trudeau raked the Conservatives during the campaign for indicating they would tinker with the future of the company in the midst of a world energy crisis.

"Petro-Canada will continue on with its role consistent with the government's stated target of energy self-sufficiency by 1990," Hnatyshyn said. "If there are areas to turn over to the private sector, then we will consider them."

The minister said the concept of the need for a state oil company had changed dramatically since 1974 when Petro-Canada was created. Since then, dwindling oil supplies had underscored the need to ensure security of supply, he said.

However, he insisted that the Conservatives had not deviated from their campaign promise to review the role of the Crown corporation.

The Conservatives had never taken the position that the company should be sold outright, he said, appearing to contradict Clark's statement.

The Conservatives came under strong attack from the Liberals and the New Democrats during the campaign for suggesting that multinational corporations should be allowed to negotiate oil supply contracts ahead of Petro-Canada.

Hnatyshyn said the Calgary-based company would continue to participate in negotiations with Mexico and Venezuela for new oil supply contracts rather than step aside for private companies.

The former Liberal government insisted that Canadian interests were not best served by private oil companies and worked at increasing the assets of Petro-Canada through takeovers.

Rebel tradesmen

region president, barred Kamloops union members from using the union hall for its study session.

"We don't like it," said Gary Thibert, association spokesman. "We have a right to use the hall."

But the more than 200 tradesmen did move to another building.

The tradesmen, who call themselves the B.C. Forest Industry Tradesmen's Association and claim 5,000 members in the three unions, feel they are entitled to the same wage revision granted benchmen or saw filers.

Benchmen were giv)n 70 cents an hour on top of the across-the-board 90-cents-an-hour increase in the first year, while tradesmen got a 30-cent revision. The tradesmen said both groups should have received a revision of $1.05 an hour.

"We regret having to hold these study sessions but it seems it is the only way for us to go," said McQuay. "All we are asking for is that all tradesmen be treated equally."

McQuay said he hopes Forest Industrial Relations Ltd. will contact the tradesmen to settle the wage issue.

Forest Industrial Relations and the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau, which bargain for the industry, have said the industry has no intention of reopening the master agreements already accepted by the unions.

Caribou may delay pipe

CALGARY (CP) — A herd of caribou could halt or delay one of the most important pipeline projects in the north, if the recommendations of the Alaska Highway Pipeline Panel are accepted.

The panel's 263-page report, due to be published today, condemns the Dempster Highway lateral line for its possible environmental effects.

The group, which is funded by the company planning the line, is particularly concerned about the possible extermination of 100,000 caribou, which the panel's chairman, Charles Templeton, describes as "part of Canada's heritage."

The report says the caribou are "too valuable an international resource to be placed in jeopardy."

The panel does not limit its comments to just the billion-dollar Dempster line.

It calls for a delay in approving any pipeline bringing gas or oil south from the Mackenzie River delta in the Yukon.

It first wants the environmental impact to be more fully investigated.

Templeton accepts that his panel's recommendations could at the very least delay pipeline projects in the north.

But he fails to see any urgency to these projects.

"Does Canada want to use up all its natural resources as quickly as possible, or have them well-managed?" he asked. "We want to leave something for future generations."

The Dempster lateral is being planned by Foothills Pipe Line (Yukon) Ltd, the consortium which is funding the panel's work.

More sunshine, no rain sighted

Victorians can look for more sunshine the rest of the weekend and at least up to Wednesday while they try to recall the last rainfall July 13.

Close to a month of drought is depressing for gardeners, but on the bright side, has had no effect on Greater Victoria water supply.

Despite increased consumption Greater Victoria Water District reservoirs still hold 10 billion gallons, enough water to last through March, "but it had better rain before the end of the year," said water commissioner Ron Upward.

He is fairly confident of normal winter rainfall and does not worry if it happens to be snowless because little of the watershed holds snow for long.

And as Upward notes, "we've never had less than 60 per cent of average rainfall on an annual basis."

Hostage-taker held

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask. (CP) — Four persons are in custody following a hostage-taking incident in a Swift Current, Sask., hotel Friday night.

RCMP said a man holding a hostage at gunpoint entered the lounge of the Hillcrest Hotel about 9:30 p.m. while two other armed men remained outside.

A hotel employee said the gunman made no initial demands.

"We just there sat there for a few minutes and then thought we'd better get out . . . he started saying everybody better get out or he's going to start blowing their heads off."

RCMP were called immediately and the incident ended quickly and peacefully with no shots fired.

42-pounder beats cutoff

Bruce Lloyd wasn't a day too early in landing "the big one" of the local salmon fishing season. The 37-year-old Lantzville boat salesman hooked a 42-pound, 15-ounce Chinook which took him 80 minutes to get into a 28-foot boat Friday morning near Nanaimo. Lloyd and fishing companion Jim Kelly of Nanaimo were strip-casting off Jack Point, an area which was closed at midnight Friday night to sports fishermen by the federal fisheries ministry for conservation purposes. The salmon was the biggest caught in the Nanaimo area this season and will be entered in a fish derby.

Two reporters have filed suit seeking release of the autopsy report on the death of rock 'n' roll superstar Elvis Presley for use in an upcoming segment on the ABC news program 20-20. The suit, filed Friday in Memphis on behalf of James Cole and Charles Thompson, asks for all records used in preparing the official report on Presley's death Aug. 16, 1977.

Meanwhile, Chuck Berry, 52, one of the fathers of rock 'n' roll, settled down to his first day in federal prison in Lompoc, Calif., today, beginning a four-month term for failure to pay $108,000 in income taxes in 1973 . . . And in Nashville, Tenn., a judge is threatening to jail entertainer country singer Dolly Parton unless her attorney files complete answers to a $3 million suit filed by her former singing partner Porter Wagoner.

Former U.S. president Richard M. Nixon has reportedly purchased a sprawling 12-room condominium, occupying an entire floor of a Fifth Avenue building overlooking Central Park in midtown Manhattan. The cost of the apartment on the corner of 62nd Street was put at nearly $1 million.

For the second time in Michigan in less than two months, doctors say a woman has given birth to a baby that developed from a fertilized egg in the mother's abdominal cavity. The mother, a 28-year-old Benton Harbor secretary who asked not to be identified, needed 13 pints of blood because of severe hemorrhaging following the surgery, according to a pleased Dr. Chung Sik Kim, who said the mother and her daughter, named LaKesha, were doing fine.

But doctors in London are not at all pleased with the case of Janet Wright, 34, who has given birth to four babies in the last five years and all of whom have fallen victim to a mysterious infant death syndrome. A senior heart specialist has been called in to investigate the latest crib death in the Wright family, that of 5½-month-old Natalie.

Leukemia victim Chad Green, 3, is in "complete remission" from cancer, says Dr. Ernesto Contreras, who operates the Tijuana clinic where the child is being cared for despite a Massachusetts court order. Contreras said the boy's progress is due to the Laetrile, adding that Chad is getting only "small doses of chemotherapy."

Elsewhere on the medical scene, County General Hospital surgeons in Milwaukee today worked to reattach the left foot and much of the right leg severed from a 13-year-old Jimmie Wade III, who slipped while trying to hop aboard a moving train Friday night.

Hundreds of Dublin workmen with bulldozers and spades began work Friday on a 160-acre site in Dublin's sprawling Phoenix Park where Pope John Paul II will hold a pontifical High Mass on his first visit to Ireland September 29.

The prime minister of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, Abel Muzorewa, is stepping aside temporarily as the United Methodist Church's bishop in that country. He will be replaced by Ralph E. Dodge, an American whom Muzorewa replaced as bishop in 1968.

A SMILING MACKANZIE PHILLIPS, 19, denies rumors she married 25-year-old One Day at a Time star Jeffery Sessler, left, but did concede that the couple does have plans to tie the knot.

After several setbacks on account of poor health, former prime minister John Diefenbaker plans to go to the Peoples' Republic of China Sept. 6 for an 18-day visit.

Australian media owner Rupert Murdoch won his battle today to control one of Sydney's four television stations. The Australian broadcasting tribunal, a government organization that reviews radio and television licences, rejected claims that Murdoch's company News Ltd. should not control the station because of his lengthy stays overseas.

Finally, prime candidate for financial loser of the year appearsto be former Nicaragua president Anastasio Somoza. Nicaragua's revolutionary government has expropriated 85 companies and one-half million acres of farmland owned or controlled by former Somoza and his associates, an official of the ruling junta said Friday, adding that the total value of the seized assets might reach $500 million.

U-boat message beached?

COPENHAGEN (AP) - A holidaying mailman found a small container washed up on a Danish beach containing a purported message from Heinz Rasch, captain of the submarine U-583 which was sunk in the Baltic Sea 38 years ago.

The captain, aware that his ship could not resurface, may have been trying to alert Nazi command to newly-developed sonar tracking equipment used by the Allies.

In Frankfurt, German historian Juergen Rohwer said there were discrepancies between the note and official records and the note "apparently must be treated with some caution."

Clark denies Moi request for wheat shortage funds

Times News Services

NAIROBI, Kenya — Sated with giraffes, water buffalo and elephants, the members of Joe Clark's African safari pulled into Kenya for their last stop on the continent today before returning home — making one of the briefest prime ministerial visits on record. Six hours. Touchdown to takeoff.

Time for a quick red-carpet walk at Jomo Kenyatta Airport past ranks of lionmane skirted dancers, lunch at state house, a couple of hours of bilateral talks with President Daniel Arap Moi, the laying of a wreath at the Kenyatta mausolem . . . and back to the airport.

Moi appealed for help in allievating a massive grain shortage in his African nation, but was reportedly told Canada's current foreign aid budget was already allocated, and it "would be extremely difficult to make amendments."

After ending his two-week political safari through Africa, the Clark contingent was to fly to Lahr, West Germany, for an overnight stop on the way home to Ottawa.

In Tanzania Friday, Clark said it is more important for Canada to help countries such as Tanzania produce food and other necessities than it is to participate in other more glamorous international activities.

He made the remark at a luncheon on the Basuto wheat farm, one of Canada's most successful aid projects in Africa. To date 25,000 acres of arid plateau, high above sea level, have been turned into productive wheatfields.

Speaking later to Canadian specialists and Tanzanian farm managers in a tin-covered maintenance shed about his African tour and the Commonwealth conference just concluded in Lusaka, Zambia, Clark said:

"In this last two weeks in Africa, we have had an opportunity to meet in many grand halls to discuss important subjects. It is safe to say, however, that no hall has been more impressive than this, and no subject more important than the one we are discussing today.

"Establishing the conditions of peace is only part of what nations are about . . . a more important role for Canada . . . is going to be work with you and other countries coming into development."

Further to the Commonwealth conference, the British cabinet gave approval Friday to U.K. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's plan for ending the black nationalist guerrilla war in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia — writing a constitution the international community will accept.

Foreign office sources said invitations will go out next week to a London conference in mid-September of the parties involved in the southern African dispute.

Commercial TV in Britain struck

LONDON (AP) — Britain's commercial television network was blacked out today by a strike of technicians and electricians.

The 16 companies involved said the shutdown may last until the middle of next week. Commercial channels were showing only captions reporting the dispute. This gave the non-advertising BBC a monopoly for its two channels.

Worries about 2,4-D

Perhaps the reason is that Ald. John Hayes has not declared his candidacy for mayor, but what many see as the most important decision by Victoria city council this year was accomplished without the noisy drum-beating associated with the pet projects of some of his colleagues.

Worried by the reports piling up on the possible dangers to health from the herbicide 2,4-D — which the city has used extensively in the parks and on boulevards — Hayes quietly got the parks department to suspend its regular application in January and February.

Why he kept quiet about it all this time — even when his committee voted in March to spray this fall — seems unusual, but perhaps only because of the style of a few of his colleagues thundering after the mayor's chain of office. They certainly aren't shy about claiming credit.

Hayes' silence also allowed time for public opinion to gather steam and for the reports of the possible hazards of 2,4-D to sink in. It may be the nearness of the civic elections, but a majority of aldermen now seem to oppose spraying with the herbicide. Originally Hayes was for it, but a little familiarity with the reports on 2,4-D created some doubts in his mind.

They are worrisome enough to warrant proceeding with extreme caution. And recent experience — merely in the last two weeks — with the misuse and abuse of pesticides and herbicides in B.C. is hair-raising.

☐ A crop duster missed a farmer's field at Westbank in the Okanagan by a wide margin and sprayed private vegetable gardens and backyards of homes. Angry residents got several stories from the company responsible about how harmless it was (they could see their gardens withering before their eyes). Finally after Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt got mad and demanded an explanation, they learned that the express regulation not to spray this particular chemical from the air had been ignored.

☐ B.C. Hydro admits a supervisor lied "up to a point" to the B.C. pesticide control branch and to residents of the upper Squamish valley about use of Tordon 10K pellets to control weed growth on a power line right of way. Residents claim he told them their children could play with the pellets — when the label on the stuff specifically says it is hazardous and skin contact should be avoided.

People are uneasy enough about using powerful chemicals to control insects and weeds without such incidents exposing sloppy handling techniques that needlessly expose bystanders to their ill effects.

In Victoria, there is not even a hint of a suggestion that the city has not scrupulously followed the approved procedures for spraying 2,4-D in the past. The issue is whether there is pressing need to spray at all. It seems doubtful.

Services for pilots

The drastic cutbacks of service at the Gonzales weather observatory are sad for Victorians. They mark the end of a tradition and the passing of an industry, albeit a tiny one, from the Victoria scene.

They are also going to pose some problems for the city's transportation business. After the cuts take effect, up-to-date weather conditions will not be available for pilots and mariners using the Inner Harbor on Saturdays and Sundays because the observatory will not be manned on weekends.

Yet the cutbacks also offer the city an opportunity, an opportunity that could benefit all marine and airline traffic in the Inner Harbor.

The opportunity is the chance to establish a flight service station for the Inner Harbor. It would be the first step in establishing a full-time control tower for harbor traffic.

The suggestion comes from Norm Dressler, weather forecaster at the Pat Bay airport. Similar stations, he said, operate in other cities, such as Nanaimo. At such a station, a well-trained radio operator takes weather observations and provides pilots with weather information and traffic advisory reports.

With serious concerns already existing about the lack of traffic control for the Inner Harbor, such a station would clearly be of help to pilots and to boaters who also use the harbor. If traffic bulletins were available, the federal transport ministry might even allow float planes, other than those operated by scheduled airlines, to resume flights into the harbor.

The flight service station could be expanded into a full traffic control centre when the volume of traffic warranted. It would certainly need to be expanded if a downtown Victoria to downtown Vancouver STOL service ever got off the ground.

The other proposal to solve the immediate problem of providing weather information on weekends is to allow the Coast Guard to take the observations from their new base being built near Ogden Point. This would ensure provision of the necessary weather data, but would do nothing about more general problems of traffic control in the harbor.

That solution would be much better than nothing — it is essential that some service be established to provide important weather readings to weekend pilots. In the long term, however, it would surely be better if local airlines, the city, and the federal ministries involved could combine to establish a flight service station, the first step to long-needed traffic control facilities for the Inner Harbor.

Schreyer angers the Tories

WINNIPEG — Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer is causing Manitoba Conservatives more political headaches now that he is removed from politics than he ever did as leader of the official opposition here.

His decision to make Winnipeg his summer home, coupled with his penchant for opening community summer fairs, is making many rural Tories see red. To complicate matters, they cannot, as avowed monarchists, criticize the first governor-general in history to show so much attention to Manitoba.

But the Manitoba Conservatives read politics into every appearance, complete with regal pomp, made by the man who just last December was their political enemy.

The political hurt may be more imagined than real, but the fact that it is perceived underlines one of the lasting difficulties of elevating an active politician to the highest non-political office in the land.

Seen as politician

From the day the new appointment was announced, every move made by the governor-general in Manitoba has had political overtones, something quite understandable when Schreyer's convention speeches, made just weeks before he became governor-general, were full of promises to continue to fight the party that had just ousted him from office.

The criticism came early after the appointment, with one of the more tasteless comments from a former Schreyer backbencher, Cy Gonick. Gonick who publishes a left-wing magazine in Winnipeg carried a back cover that showed the new governor-general in a particularly jovial mood, and that carried the caption:

"The working class can kiss my a - -,

"I've got the governor-general's job at last."

Within a month of taking office, Schreyer made his first official visit to his home province, to pay his respects to the legislature and to present medals at the Canada winter games.

A few weeks later, a piece of Liberal party campaign literature was distributed containing a picture of the new governor-general, an event that prompted Schreyer's successor as NDP leader, Howard Pawley, to comment that he would not support any exploitation of the governor-general for political purposes. A Conservative back bencher, Wally McKenzie, asked Pawley if he would consider it exploitation if Schreyer had allowed the New Democrats to use his picture rather than the Liberals?

ED SCHREYER
... informal and gregarious

When the governor-general made an aerial inspection of the Red River flood this spring, his inadvertent remark concerning the inability of farmers to move grain out of the flood area was interpreted as an implied criticism of the Canadian wheat board. This was not the only political consequence of that particular visit. When the government house leader, Harry Enns, was criticized for attempting to make political hay out of the flood, he retaliated by hinting that the governor-general's visit was little more than politics.

His apology had to be dragged by opposition members from the mouth of the Conservative minister.

These early skirmishes have produced a more sophisticated, less directly political approach by the new governor-general. During the time since the Schreyers virtually moved back to Manitoba this summer, living in railway cars parked on the outskirts of the city, the new governor-general has appeared in many rural communities to the consternation of the Conservatives.

He has opened the King Miner days in the northern community of Thompson, opened the Carman community fair, attended the Ukrainian festival at Dauphin and the Icelandic festival at Gimli.

He's shielded

Some Manitoba Conservatives have become almost paranoid about how the governor-general selects the events he will attend. When he turned down an invitation to present the trophy at the Manitoba Derby in Winnipeg to attend the St. Lazare Athletic Association annual picnic, the suspicion was that the socialist votes were more easily identifiable at St. Lazare than among the city's horse-racing crowd.

The thing that bothers Manitoba Conservatives the most is that for more than eight years, it was impossible to separate Ed Schreyer from the NDP administration in Manitoba. Every election, Ed Schreyer became the party. It was as if he was running in all 57 constituencies.

The Conservatives believe that this image has not suddenly disappeared now that Schreyer is the governor-general. They believe that when he makes a vice-regal appearance he is also making a political appearance.

When he was a politician he could be criticized. As the Queen's representative he cannot. Manitoba Conservatives believe this shield makes him all the more effective politically, even though he has no political office.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

It's report card time: Victoria school board

Each year once the legislative session ends, it's time for the editor's report card for elected officials in the Greater Victoria area, both local and provincial. In 1979, cards will be awarded for cabinet ministers, some opposition MLAs (others have really not had time since the election to prove themselves), Victoria city council, Saanich council, and the Greater Victoria school board.

As always, it must be made clear that these grades are entirely subjective, based on the observations of the editor and a few friendly spies during the past eight months. Factors taken into account in awarding grades are effectiveness, devotion to duty, political performance, creativity and innovation, and responsiveness to the public.

The grades are roughly equivalent to those used in schools: A = excellent; B = good; C = mediocre; D = unsatisfactory. The politicians are listed roughly in order of merit.

The report cards begin this week with the nine trustees from the Greater Victoria school board. It should be noted that a number of trustees are criticized severely for having allowed ideological battles to get in the way of board functioning during the year. A board retreat last month appears to have eased this problem somewhat, and some of these trustees may rate higher in future as a result.

Martin Levin — (A) — Levin, a new trustee, began the year too impatient and too inclined to resort to raw power to accomplish his aims. However, he quickly learned more tolerance and patience to become a most effective trustee. He has rapidly developed a good grasp of issues facing the board and has produced some concrete proposals for action.

Susan Brice — (A) — Brice has moved this year from the position of chairman to a role as unofficial "leader of the opposition." Her years as chairman have given her a detailed background in all school district affairs, and she has effectively encouraged the board to delve into some basic educational issues that otherwise tend to be ignored — such questions as homework, exams, and report cards.

Carol Pickup — (B) — Pickup took over the chairman's reins from Brice this year, and for the first couple of months, it seemed the job might prove impossible. Like Levin, Pickup didn't improve the strenuous conflicts by resorting to force to get things moving. But she too learned quickly, and is beginning to develop a board that may work as an effective team, despite wide differences of opinion on philosophy and ideology.

Mary Breer — (B) — Breer's strengths do not lie in the political process itself. She says little at meetings, and does not use the board to best advantage. However, she gains many marks for her tireless work behind the scenes, helping parents and students who have problems with the system. She also maintains a watching brief to ensure that the needs of children with learning disabilities are met.

Win Mott — (B) — Mott, another new trustee, has taken a little longer to settle into stride than Levin. For some time he seemed quite bewildered by the political machinations of the board and unable to cope with the intense conflicts that developed. He is now starting to come to terms with some of the difficult problems that face him as chairman of the board's planning committee.

John Young — (C) — Young's performance has improved since he found himself on the side of the board that actually wins votes. The knowledge that his motions will probably be implemented has made them a little more practical, a little less idealistic. However, his lengthy history of conflict with several of the other trustees still leads to many unproductive confrontations.

Glyn Williams — (C) — Moving to the side of the board that usually loses votes has definitely weakened Williams' performance. His expertise in financial areas remains a real strength to the board, but he has not discovered how to handle the frustrations of losing ideological battles. He tends to tie up too much board times with immensely detailed questions that could better be handled by other means.

Peter Yorke — (C) — Yorke is another who has has not shown himself capable of handling the wide differences of philosophy on the board. He has shown a tendency to provoke unnecessary confrontations on minor issues. Worse, he has frequently attacked the board's senior staff in public rather than keeping the blame on elected officials where it belongs.

Mark Fisher — (D) — Many observers were surprised when Fisher ran for re-election last November since he seemed to have burned himself out and lost interest in much board business. He won re-election, but he hasn't shown many signs of regaining interest and enthusiasm. The only exception is the area of program development for adolescents where he has been quite productive. Also, he still tends to talk in jargon absolutely incomprehensible to the average person.

The board as a whole — (C) — This is a board where creativity and innovation flourish. Its members are genuinely concerned about both providing good quality education and being fiscally responsible. However, especially for the first six months of the year, ideological and philosophic conflicts prevented the board from reaching anything like its full potential. — B.McL.

Selfish joggers

Every day now I see countless joggers sweating up and down Beach Drive, selfishly and wastefully burning off their excess energy. How much better would it be if these joggers were equipped with Chinese-style rickshaws so that they could take impoverished elderly ladies and men out for a run in the sun and air?

Incidentally, for those of you who haven't tried pulling a rickshaw, I should point out that one of the main advantages is that any desired amount of your weight (i.e. of the puller) can be counterbalanced by the opposing weight of the rickshaw and its cargo — depending merely on where you grasp the poles.

Just imagine how nice it would be to be jogging in the Victoria sunshine, with say, only half your usual weight on your legs and feet, and at the same time, being entertained by the cheerful reminiscences of your happy passenger! — Roger G. Napier, 80 King George Terrace.

Tunnel vision

Re: the letter Stop Complaining (Aug. 4): The writer obviously has a bad case of tunnel vision. In his opinion all developments should proceed at maximum speed with no questions asked regardless of the consequences. The environmental effects should not be discussed and citizens' groups should be outlawed. He even feels that people who work from nine to five and retirees are suspect.

On the other hand, he does not seem to recall that not too many years ago one could purchase a lot and erect the home of his choice without having the type and price dictated by developer. Correct me if I am wrong, but I always thought that in a democratic society, that citizens' or other groups were supposed to have the privilege of stating their case as well as those who are going to "skim off the cream", as it were.

In Grossett's opinion the people who have their life savings tied up in a home, in many cases being "boxed in" by a large mortgage, should have no rights where a development is concerned. If it is good for "General Bullmoose," it's good for everyone, even if it creates an instant slum. I do agree that environmentalists advice should be disregarded inasmuch as who would want to hear of the erection of sewage treatment plants when we can discharge millions of gallons of raw sewage into the sea and enjoy the attendant pollution.

We need to commence constructing nuclear power plants so the construction industry can experience boom conditions, notwithstanding the fact that after 30 years of endeavor no one has solved the problem of what to do about the disposition of radio active wastes. — W.A. Drummond, Duncan.

Like flies

Regardless of whether there are humanitarian or compassionate factors to warrant special consideration to the Chilean man who jumped ship in March 1977, I find it appalling that here is a man supported by church groups and some MPs. In two years he must have proven his credibility to be supported by these groups; yet our Immigration Minister Ron Atkey decides he cannot do anything for the man, but also sees fit to allow these boat people to bombard Canada like flies, his office admittedly saying their staff is overworked in the overseeing as to the background of some of these people. I refuse to believe all of the boat people are coming to this country with a healthy purpose in mind.

Could it be the poor fellow did not have the money to buy his way out of his country? Money talks, it happens time and time again. Have these boat people (all of them) been checked out to find out where the money came from they got to buy their way out? Could it be some got it from the Communists, to be future trouble for our country?

This is still a free country where one can express opinions. A daily paper has the right to publish pros and cons, to enlighten people on both sides of the fence. Many would agree with me. We who are concerned about our country should not be labeled as immoral or ungenerous because we are not in complete agreement with people's views opposite to ours in acceptance of these people. I only hope they are right and I am wrong, 20 to 40 years hence. — L. M. James, 50 Menzies Street.

Dropping out isn't what it used to be

CONCORD, Mass. — It is 10 o'clock on a Monday morning and I am playing hookey at Walden Pond. Because I am, hopelessly, a member of the working class, I carry a prop with me: a library copy of Walden.

My excuse is a simple one: an anniversary trip. The book in front of me was published 125 years ago this week, so I sit here reading it, only mildly self-conscious, taking notes.

It is impossible not to feel the incongruity between Henry David Thoreau's Walden Pond and this Walden Pond. Today, where the man built a house and took up a rather solitary existence, there is a state park.

The field has been paved with three parking lots. The pond now has a concrete dock. Children cover the water like ants on a peach pit. The water is dotted with aluminum cans and the air is polluted with portable radios. Sitting near me on the shore are four teenagers marching to the beat of a disco drum.

* * *

It is easy, maybe too easy this morning, in this place to share the feelings of a man who preferred nature to conversation and "never found the companion who was so companionable as solitude." It is easy to understand his preference for the simple life.

But dropping out isn't what it used to be.

Thoreau left his Concord in rebellion, rebellion from the harshness of its workaday life, its relentless Protestant ethic. He was a romantic on a private quest for joy.

"The mass of men lead lives of quiet desperation," he wrote. "What is called resignation is confirmed desperation." Thoreau rejected desperation. He left to cultivate a life so pared down that he could afford the only luxury he found appealing: the leisure to read and to think.

"I went to the woods because I wished to live deliberately, to confront only the essential facts of life and see if I could not learn what it had to teach and not, when I came to die, discover that I had not lived . . . I wanted to live deep and suck out all the marrow of life, to live so sturdily and Spartan-like as to put to rout all that was not life . . ."

There was, I think, a passion about him which I used to see in others who also dropped out of one life and into another. In the late '60s people left Boston, New York, cities and corporations. Some of them were naive and some of their experiments were a dismal failure. But there was at least the energy, the desire to create "better ways."

For many, most of them, self-sufficiency was the baseline and joy was the goal.

But now when people leave — work, town, school — they don't seem to be questing, but, rather, quitting. It isn't the optimists who are dropping out, it is the pessimists. It isn't the people who want to avoid "quiet desperation," but rather those who are confirming their desperation.

Thoreau wasn't copping out in Walden, he was engaging the world. His sense of responsibility, to himself, for himself, runs through the book like sinew. He wanted his life to make a difference. But the dropouts I meet now don't seem to know that there is a difference.

In the past year, it seems, I have met a half a dozen healthy employable young people who talk about living off the land, but actually live off the dole. I have seen too many ex-students cashing cheques from mom and dad and food stamps from Uncle Sam. I hear older others talk about "alternative life-styles," when they are just drifting.

Last week, I browsed through a book called Breaktime about people who quit the world of 9 to 5. Most of them were dreadful people in the business of sponging. Most of them weren't trying to create anything. They were trying to avoid things.

I think about them now on this anniversary while I play hookey here with my hardbound "excuse." In the closing pages of Walden, Thoreau writes: "I learned this at least by my experiment: that if one advances confidently in the direction of his dreams, and endeavors to live the life which he has imagined, he will meet with a success unexpected in common hours."

I wonder what is missing among the new breed of dropouts. Could it be endeavor?

Insurance ripoff

NEW YORK TIMES

Would you put your money in a savings account paying 1.3 per cent interest? According to a new U.S. Federal Trade Commission report, that's just about what many Americans do in purchasing life insurance. Life insurance companies hold more than $140 billion of the public's savings — roughly the amount held in passbook savings and loan association accounts — and generally pay returns far below the rate available in equally secure investments. The only plausible explanation is that policyholders don't realize how raw a deal they're getting. By the commission's reckoning, and ours, the most sensible solution is tough disclosure rules for life insurance companies.

The problem concerns "whole" life insurance. That is the most popular form, involving savings as well as insurance. In 1977 only about half of every insurance dollar was used to pay for death benefits and company expenses. The rest was socked away in insurance company investments on behalf of the policyholders or returned to them as dividends.

The holders of some of the policies examined by the Federal Trade Commission were paid a return, on the investment portion of their premiums, that was comparable to what they could have earned in the bank. But most policies, particularly those first written in the 1950's and early 1960's, paid far less. And virtually every purchaser of whole life insurance who allowed the policy to lapse within five years of purchase earned no interest at all.

Buyers can, of course, avoid the problem by avoiding whole life insurance and putting their savings in a bank. However, if people insist on buying whole life insurance — and more important, if agents insist on selling it — then it is only reasonable that they be required to disclose the true rates of interest. That would permit comparison shopping.

In 1979, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners — the organization of state insurance regulators — prepared a model disclosure code for the states. But it is inadequate, providing no means to compare the interest return on individual policies or the return on whole life with other investments. The Federal Trade Commission thus argues for major changes.

The F.T.C.'s whole-life recommendations carry no legal weight; the McCarran-Ferguson Act delegates all insurance regulation to the states. But Americans spent $34 billion on life insurance in 1977. The market is so large and the inequities are so great that cost disclosure is imperative.

The little Dipper defies currents

Moving water, particularly rapidly moving water, has a hypnotic effect on me. It doesn't quite put me to sleep, but watching sparkling water rushing over glistening rocks does help to turn off my conscious mind and let my subconscious take me where it will.

I was in the middle of such a subconscious reverie on the banks of the Goldstream River recently, when one of the many tiny eddies that I was watching near my feet suddenly got up and flew away.

Now, even in a subconscious dream, eddies don't get up and fly away — at least not in mine. So it was that this particular flying eddy brought me back to reality with a start.

You've probably guessed by now that what got up and flew away was not an eddy but an equally common feature of cold, rapid, mountain streams throughout British Columbia, a Dipper — that anomaly of the bird world that is designed as a land bird but which spends as much of its time in, and under, water as many so-called "water" birds.

* * *

My dream-breaking Dipper hadn't gone far. It had collapsed into a quiet, shallow pool — a little farther up-stream — after buzzing low over the water in that peculiarly "out-of-control" way Dippers have of flying.

For a few moments I lost sight of the bird. I assumed it was making its way against the current, walking along the bottom feeding as it went, picking aquatic insects from stones, and turning over other stones to snap up whatever lay hidden beneath them. I also wondered, as I have so often when I think of Dippers "walking" under water, about how they manage to maintain a "hold" and to make progress against sometimes quite boisterous currents.

Like most people who give thought to such things, I was quite prepared to accept the idea that Dippers did actually grasp stones on the stream bed and thus maintain their position. I'll admit, I often had misgivings about this explanation — after all, one mis-step and a Dipper could end up being rolled downstream like a bowling ball, and there's no evidence that such disastrous events ever occur.

* * *

But more analytical minds than mine have been applied to the problem and a new proposal has recently been produced to explain how Dippers can ignore the current and still operate under water — they don't ignore the current, they use it. Apparently, with balance as delicate as any prima ballerina, a Dipper can face the current and by adjusting the angle of its body against the flow use the pressure of the current to keep it on the bottom.

Of course such an explanation is only valid when Dippers are walking up-stream. If they turn around and walk downstream, the bowling-ball syndrome takes over — or so one would think.

At this point in my thinking, my interest in that Dipper in the pool in front of me became a little more intense. Would it — or could it — defy the current and head downstream under water?

After watching the bird for several minutes, I still had no answer. Every time it surfaced it was facing up-stream, and every time it entered the water it was facing up-stream. I never saw it with its back to the current and can only assume that in the neatness of evolution only Dippers that face up-stream survive to produce more Dippers that face up-stream. Of those that face downstream? Well, they seem to have the odds, as well as the current, against them.

With this kind of thinking, you can see that the rushing, moving, sparkling water had begun to take effect again.

Speaking with a crooked tongue

The art of euphemism — refusing to use painful words like "dying" — has not passed away.

At Harvard's Graduate School of Business Administration, Prof. Howard Raiffa teaches a course in Competitive Decision Making that realistically faces up to a negotiator's need to lie: Students must realize, instructs Professor Raiffa, that occasions will arise when they will be particularly vulnerable if they honestly reveal information that could be exploited by less scrupulous adversaries. The name he has adopted for one option to be considered when bluffing, or misleading, seems called for is "strategic misrepresentation," which the earliest residents of this continent called "speaking with forked tongue" and which we honestly call "lying."

To some degree, euphemism is strategic misrepresentation. A few years ago, I wrote a column which contained what a state department spokesman denounced as a "contemptuous lie" (he meant "contemptible," and, when corrected, growled, "That, too.") Henry Kissinger, who was secretary of state at that time, was more restrained in his public reaction; he called it "a canard." As one who smacks his lips over canard roti a l'orange, I wondered why the French word for duck — canard — means lie or great hoax. A nervous man at State's French desk, who kept saying he did not want to get involved, explained that the original expression was vendre un canard a motile, "to half-sell a duck" — that is, to pretend to sell it with intent to cheat. In English, though, "canard" has come to mean "lie"; it carries an overtone of tall story that euphemistically takes much of the sting out of such an accusation.

A park ranger in the Grand Canyon has an assignment to kill the wild burros who eat the scrub and cause erosion. Just as CIA operatives used "termination with extreme prejudice" to describe liquidation, itself a euphemism for "assassination," the park service calls its necessary intercession with natural ecology "direct reduction." "Are you going to kill the burros?" asked a CBS reporter. "Well, sir, we call it 'direct reduction.'" Calling this to my attention, newsman Michael Winship wonders: "What do you suppose indirect reduction of burros constitutes? Birth-control lectures?" (Birth control, by the way, it not a euphemism; it is a more understandable term for contraception.) Another reader, David Silberstein of Connecticut, suggests that the next euphemism for "birth control" will be "evading the issue."

The best new advertising sweetener was sent in by editorial writer Harold Lavine of The Arizona Republic: "There is a used-car dealer on Camelback Road in Phoenix who sells 'pre-owned Cadillacs.'" This usage, which eschews "used," can also be heard hawking a previously owned Mercedes in Maryland. Cheap cars become used; expensive cars become previously owned. (Would you buy a previously owned car from this candidate?)

"Sweeten," ironically, is a word advertisers are shying away from in these trying times. An apple-juice manufacturer who adds a sweetener to his product has rejected "sweetened" in favor of a new participle: "sophisticated." Apple juice is less tart when it has been sophisticated by a ton of sugar.

The most significant euphemism of the year was introduced into the field that understands opinion-molding best: public relations. That phrase was coined by Ivy Lee, who burnished John D. Rockefeller's image; it was shaped into "public-relations counsel" by Edward L. Bernays, who detested "press agent," and was replaced in the military by "public information," which seems less manipulative; it has been further euphemized into "public affairs" and "corporate communications."

WENNER . . . no irony intended

Comes now the Environmental Protection Agency (populated by what used to be called "conservationists") to comb its flacks in a new and far more other-directed way: the Office of Public Awareness. "There's been a tendency to PR the public," explained Joan Nicholson, director and namer of the office, who uses the initials of "public relations" as a pejorative verb, "about how groovy the agency is. I wanted to somehow signal the public that we were wanting to hear from them . . ." Evidently public awareness is an offshoot of what used to be called "outreach" until it was hooted out of existence, and will one day be followed by an Office of Public Sympathy, headed by a chaplain handing out punchable cards.

Miss Nicholson ought to be made publicly aware that few people use "groovy" anymore. Also, please be aware that calling a flack an awarenik denigrates the pervasive function of public relations, sophisticating a previously owned expression to the point of strategic misrepresentation.

SMOKING ARROWS

"A 'Straight Arrow' Quits the Pentagon" was a headline in The New York Times Week in Review about Stanley Resor, described as a "'straight-arrow' public servant who simply got 'frozen out' by a bureaucracy whose power games he had no taste for."

As every aficionado of Watergate lingo knows, "straight arrow" (hyphenated when an adjective, but not when used as a noun) denotes a person of pristine probity: one who would never deviate from the straight and narrow, no matter how straight the gate.

Where did the term originate? In the 16th century, straight gained a meaning of honest, and an early citation in the Oxford English Dictionary offers the simple "straight as a shingle." In women, straight meant virtuous, and "straight as an arrow" was a natural variant of "shingle" to speakers not engaged in roofing.

In the 1940s and 50s, slanguist Stuart Berg Flexner informs me, musicians gave the word a connotation of square — conservative, establishment, not jazzy. In another context but in a related usage, "straight" became the opposte of "gay." Also, as used by drug addicts, the adjective "straight" was applied to a non-user, in the same way as one who despises all conventions uses conventional.

In 1967, Jann Wenner chose the name Straight Arrow for his publishing house, which prints Rolling Stone magazine and otherwise gathers little moss. Wenner says he took the name from the phrase "straight as an arrow" because it was a term meaning "honest" and "square dealing." He says he did not intend it to be ironic.

The phrase was snapped up by the counterculture of the late 60s, followed by the eager-to-be-with-it crowd in politics; however, "straight arrow" soon gained its connotation of "Boy Scout" or "jock," in the way that the meaning of straight was twisted from honest to a derogative conventional in the late 50s.

There you have the origin of "straight arrow," with its current coloration; in a related etymological breakthrough, I have run across the roots of another Watergate favorite, "smoking pistol."

The smoking pistol, or gun, meant the crucial piece of evidence; as it turned out, the cover-up instructions on the White House tape of June 23, 1972, was the smoking pistol that caused Richard Nixon to resign.

A Baker Street Irregular, Peter Blau of Washington, D.C., has nailed down the phrase's first use in its guilt-proving sense (until someone else sends an earlier citation). In the Sherlock Holmes mystery The Gloria Scott," first published in The Strand Magazine in April 1893, author Arthur Conan Doyle has a character describe a mutiny on a convict ship: "Then we rushed on into the captain's cabin, but as we pushed open the door there was an explosion from within, and there he lay with his brains smeared over the chart of the Atlantic which was pinned upon the table, while the chaplain stood with a smoking pistol in his hand at his elbow."

Foothills drops ocean route

OTTAWA (CP) — Foothills Oil Pipeline Ltd. has decided to drop its proposal to build an ocean and land pipeline to carry Alaskan oil through Canada to the lower 48 states and will concentrate instead on winning support for its alternative all-land route.

Foothills president Ed Phillips announced the decision Friday at a news conference, telling reporters his company had always preferred the all-land route to Edmonton from near Fairbanks, Alaska.

Phillips said the switch was made in response to U.S. President Jimmy Carter's new energy policy which emphasizes reduced dependence upon imported oil.

The proposed ocean and land route which called for a new oil port at Skagway, Alaska, near the Yukon-British Columbia border depended on off-shore oil to supplement flows from Alaska to make the project economically viable.

The estimated cost of the longer and more expensive all-land route is $1.6 billion (U.S.) for a total of 2,408 kilometres. The Canadian portion would run for 2,112 kilometres at a cost of $1.1 billion.

Phillips also emphasized the overland route would remove the risk of environmental damage to the west coast by tanker traffic.

Foothills, the Vancouver-based company also seeking to construct a natural gas pipeline along the same corridor, concedes that financing for the project is contingent upon new oil discoveries in Alaska.

Phillips said the economics of the all-land route will be dramatically enhanced by new discoveries in Alaska.

The former Liberal government, in response to a request from the U.S., said in April that of four competing proposals to move Alaskan oil south, it preferred the Foothills project. The new Progressive Conservative government has not altered that stance.

However, the National Energy Board must still conduct hearings and approve the pipeline before the U.S. can make a formal decision.

Phillips called for speedy action by the federal regulatory agency so the U.S. government can make a decision. He estimated construction could begin by the end of next year and oil could begin flowing south by the end of 1982.

From Edmonton, the oil would moveinto the U.S. midwest through existing pipeline facilities. Alaskan oil now is moved to Chicago through the Panama Canal which increases transportation costs.

Foothills wants the oil pipeline built before completion of the natural gas pipeline, arguing that Canadian industry will receive the benefits of such a timetable.

Phillips has warned that unless Canada acts quickly it could forfeit the $1 billion plus construction project and related economic spinoffs.

Newsprint production off

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian newsprint production is running below last year's levels, according to figures released by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association.

Production for June, 1979, was 715,000 tonnes, down two per cent from 1978 levels. First half production was 4.3 million tonnes, also off two per cent from the same period last year.

The industry operated at 96 per cent capacity in June, 1979, compared with 99 per cent in the same month last year.

Total North American inventories of newsprint were 1,151,000 tonnes at the end of June, 1979, up slightly from the 1,495,000 reported by the same date last year. U.S. consumers stocks at the end of June equalled 37 days supply, compared with 48 days worth of stock last year.

Air Canada posts small first half income gain

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada has reported income for the first half of 1979 was $24.2 million, an increase of about one per cent over the $23.9 million earned in the same period last year.

The slow growth income was a result of increasing operating expenses, the federally-owned corporation said in a statement released Thursday.

The corporation complained that Canadian domestic fares have risen by five per cent since April, 1978, while comparable fares in the U.S. have risen 17.8 per cent in the first seven months of 1979. The Canadian transport commission delayed until next January 1980, a fare increase scheduled for January, 1979.

Air Canada's average operating margin of 5.9 per cent in the last year is "clearly inadequate for an industry which requires extremely large capital investment to keep its fleet modern."

During the second quarter of this year, Air Canada ordered six Lockheed long-range L-1011-500 aircraft and 12 Boeing 767s, at a cost of $900 million.

The corporation also noted its "innovative marketing of surplus seats," which helped sustain operating revenues, increased 12 per cent to $734 million in the first half of this year.

DIAMOND: THE HOW OF IT

The diamond you own is a miracle of nature. In the millions of years between its birth and its discovery, your diamond has seen the evolution of different plant and animal forms, different weather cycles, the dawn of man and thousands of years of human development. Through all that, it has endured.

The diamond you own is a masterpiece of man. First tons of rock must be blasted and put through a lengthy process to separate the diamond material from its host rock. About 3500 tons of rock must be processed to recover just one ounce (142 carats) of diamonds. Of course, out of that ounce the smaller portion of the crystals will be gem quality; the rest will be industrial goods. At this point, the diamonds must be sorted and graded for color and clarity before they are placed on the market.

A diamond in the rough is not very attractive. It's no wonder the stone was overlooked in the many centuries before cutting and polishing were fully understood. The rough diamond has a dull waxy look and comes in strange shapes, usually octahedral. It takes skilled cutting and polishing to bring out the diamond's true beauty.

First the diamond is cleaved or sawed to take best advantage of the rough crystal. Then it is rounded, faceted and polished. The cut and polished stone must be graded to establish its per carat selling price to the next buyer along the chain.

The work performed from the mine to the retail jewelry store is time-consuming and expensive . . . but well worth it. Through his advanced knowledge, man has taken nature's raw material and maximized its beauty. You must agree that this is a true art.

Coal could be our new black gold

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal scientists say there is more than enough domestic coal to fuel the future but industry first must learn how to use it.

Estimated coal resources amount to more than 207 tonnes, counting only deposits which can be mined by current technology, the energy department says in a recent report.

Substantial reserves also are known to exist in the Arctic, but energy experts do not know yet how much and how it can be recovered.

And because of high transportation costs involved in bringing eastern or western coal to Ontario and Quebec, especially if the quality is low, much of the coal used in central Canada is imported from the United States.

Scientists at the Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, a branch of the energy department, say another major problem has been to develop the technology so domestic coal can be converted into liquid and gaseous fuels, substituted for oil and natural gas and used to produce steel.

John Price is a research scientist at the centre's coal processing research section in one of 13 laboratory buildings located on a 129-acre site outside the city.

Currently 90 per cent of coking coal used by the steel industry is imported from the U.S. and Price says that is because American coking coal isthe best in the world.

"The most important factor involved with making steel is chemistry and Canadian coal is different."

Canadian coal breaks down into finer particles and does not soften or melt the same way, he says.

But since 1955, scientists have been working with industry using pilot scale coke ovens to demonstrate the feasibility of manufacturing good quality coke from Canadian coals by mixing coal blends and innovating cokemaking.

Preliminary results indicate a good quality metallurgical coke can be produced from Canadian coals, Price said.

Bill Montgomery, head of the coal evaluation group at the lab, says similar work has started in federal labs in Edmonton.

"Most of this work is practical research to bring Canada to self-sufficiency in coking coal. Instead of importing the coal, we can create employment in our own industry by using Canadian coals."

Comsat home service soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Comsat, a communications satellite company, announced Friday it might be offering subscription television service directly to millions of homes in the United States by 1983.

Joseph Charyk, Comsat president, said the required technology is available and the company is discussing with other firms the business potential.

Experiments with the technology required to provide such a service has been conducted primarily in the United States, Canada and Japan. Comsat has used the Canadian satellite Hermes and a Comsat-developed dish antenna suitable for rooftop installation.

The service would offer subscribers programming over several channels simultaneously, with no commercial interruptions and emphasizing first-run movies, sports events, educational and cultural programs, data and text transmissions.

Manufacturing shipments up

OTTAWA (CP) — Shipments by manufacturing industries in May increased 9.7 per cent from a month earlier to $13.19 billion, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The federal agency also said manufacturers reported new orders received in May rose to $13.57 billion, up 9.5 per cent from April.

Officials say part of the increase is a result of inflation. But the latest figures indicate a turnaround from a decline in both shipments and new orders in April compared with March.

The two are an important measure of the health of the economy because they give an indication of recent production as well as future production requirments.

More production means more jobs and profits.

Statistics Canada said unfilled orders in May stood at $16.15 billion, about 2.5 per cent higher than April.

Tot swept from cougar's maw

PORT HARDY (CP) — The quick action of a broom-brandishing woman saved a four-year-old girl from being carried off by cougar that had the child clutched in its jaws.

Constable Norm Usher, of the RCMP detachment here, said that Mary Loewen's attack scared the cougar into dropping Eva Walkus uninjured

The cougar stalked the girl at the Tsulquate Indian reserve while she was playing with Ernie Walkus, 6, at a group home supervised by Loewen.

Usher said the cougar grabbed the girl off the swing and dragged her about four feet toward the bush by the house.

"It's a good thing it was suppertime and the woman came out of the house to call the youngsters to eat," Usher said. "If she hadn't seen the cougar it probably would have got away with the child."

The tot was treated for shock at the hospital here and given rabies shots before being released.

"The teeth marks of the cougar did not pierce her skin," Usher said. "It didn't get a chance to chew on her."

Rejected B.C. MD cools talk over split

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia doctor nominated for president of the Canadian Medical Association (CMA) and then defeated says he does not support a suggestion that the B.C. Medical Association (BCMA) split with the national body.

Several B.C. doctors have resigned from the group and a number have requested the BCMA's board of directors to call a referendum on whether the provincial group should pull out because the CMA snubbed provincial doctors when it rejected Dr. William Jory for president at its annual convention in Toronto in June.

Dr. William Thomas, a Vancouver obstretrician, was elected as president after being nominated from the floor at the last minute.

Ordinarily, the province which hosts the next convention — B.C. in this case — nominates the candidate who is then elected president.

Jory was the nominee elected by the BCMA's membership, but his reputation as a reformer appears to have led to his rejection.

"The other provinces weren't prepared (for Jory's approach)," said BCMA president Dr. Mel Petreman, who said Thomas was nominated by a Saskatchewan doctor.

Jory, who had the support of the BCMA's board of directors at the convention, said nothing would be achieved by the provincial group resigning from the national body.

Prison-death vigil

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 35 demonstrators gathered outside the British Columbia Penetentiary completed a 24-hour vigil and fast Friday night to mark the fourth National Prison Justice Day.

Claire Culhane, founder of the Vancouver-based Prisoners' Rights Group, said Aug. 10 is the day set aside by prisoners and their families and friends to protest against the number of prison suicides and deaths.

She said the vigil is held then because that is the date in 1974 when Edward Nalon died of a heart attack in his solitary confinement cell at Millhaven maximum security prison in Kingston, Ont.

Passing motorists honked their car horns and some passengers frowned at the demonstrators as they paraded in front of the century-old B.C. Pentitentiary.

Burnaby NDP MP Svend Robinson attacked the prison system as "a dumping ground" for young people. He criticized the lack of action taken on prison reform especially as many reports and studies on the penal system in Canada find faults with it.

The demonstrators called for a moratorium on prison construction and abolition of solitary confinement.

Other demands included retention of legislation that abolishes capital punishment, an end to excessive sentencing and prompt public inquests into prison deaths.

New PNE pact in union court

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for the Pacific National Exhibition and the union representing 600 exhibition employees hammered out a revised contract proposal after a five-hour bargaining session Friday night.

PNE spokesman Bill Joiner said the executive of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, local 1004, has called a membership meeting for Sunday morning to present the proposal to its members. No details of the proposal were released.

Joiner said it was not known if the union negotiators would make any recommendation on the offer to the membership.

There had been fears that the PNE employees might go on strike this weekend, but Joiner said the union has assured the board it will not disrupt today's rock concert at Empire Stadium which is expected to attract more than 40,000 persons.

A major stumbling block was the union's demand for a cost-of-living clause in the first year of a two-year contract despite the fact that recent settlements between the same CUPE local and various Vancouver area municipalities do not include such a clause.

In the past, the union has always accepted identical agreements to those accepted by the municipalities, apart from local issues.

PNE president Erwin Swangard said the board was adamant about not including a cost-of-living clause in any agreement.

Minister scotches alcoholic centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city has been rebuffed in an attempt to have a facility designated for maintenance and treatment of chronic alcoholics.

The city proposed in a letter to Bert Hoskin, chairman of the Alcohol and Drug Commission, that new legislation be drafted giving the city power to set up the facility at which the alcoholic would receive food, shelter and health care, participate in a work program and receive counselling.

Compulsory committal for up to 90 days would be available.

However, Health Minister Bob McClelland's position, stated in a response from the commission, says that even though detoxification centres around the province are paid for and operated by the health ministry through the commission, "responsibility for the care of chronic alcoholics does not fall within the purview" of his ministry.

He did not suggest whose responsibility it is.

Doug Purdy, deputy director of the social planning department, said the response is "evasive, irresponsible and unhelpful."

He said the commission has denied any interest in maintenance of alcoholics, yet it has maintenance programs for drug addicts.

Alberni Queen gives her king-size headache

Diane Robertson probably wishes she never saw the ferry Queen of Alberni.

Robertson, 32, of Mission, lost her purse July 7 on board the vessel.

When she went to claim it at the Sidney RCMP office she got it back — along with a summons for possession of marijuana police had found in the purse.

She was ordered to appear in court Thursday in Victoria.

But she turned up late.

The reason: Robertson was aboard the Alberni when it crashed into Collinson Reef.

She was given a suspended sentence and four months probation.

Six-month sentence for drugs

A 28-year-old Victoria man was sentenced in county court today to six months in jail for possession of seven pounds of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking.

Dennis Grant Laverty pleaded guilty to the offence which occurred Jan. 15 in View Royal when police saw him hand packages of the drug to another man in a bush area near an apartment.

Laverty, who has convictions for trafficking in LSD in 1970 and possession of amphetimines for the purposes of traficking in 1974, has been in custody since the offence.

Judge Leslie Cashman said he was left in some doubt about Laverty's efforts to rehabilitate himself but would give him the benefit of the doubt in making the sentence only six months.

$54,000 for Vial of Life

A grant of $54,000 from the B.C. Lottery Fund has been given the B.C. Ambulance Employees Union for its Vial of Life program.

The program provides plastic cylinders with brief medical forms to place in refrigerators with a decal on the outside of the door so rescuers can go to the vial and obtain life-saving information quickly.

The grant will enable the union to provide a kit, which contains 500 of the plastic vials, at all ambulance stations.

Talks start on road along spit

Negotiations have started between the department of national defence and the province to turn over the DND road running across Esquimalt Lagoon spit to the B.C. highways ministry.

The bridge spanning the entrance to the lagoon and the road across the spit to 50 yards from the Lagoon road intersection is owned by DND.

A highways spokesman said some technicalities are holding up the takeover but he would not say if they concern the bridge.

Federal officials want to keep the structure at its present size to prevent the route from becoming a major highway for gravel trucks and commuters to the city.

A larger bridge and improvements to the road could turn the spit into a major thoroughfare to the region's western sector, lowering the recreational value of the lagoon and surrounding area, they feel.

The spit is adjacent to Fort Rodd Hill National Historic Park.

Ocean Boulevard which terminates at the bridge is next to Parks Canada property.

Before the judge

A 37-year-old woman charged with the attempted murder of her 63-year-old mother following a stabbing last Saturday has been pronounced mentally ill but able to instruct her counsel and to understand legal proceedings against her.

Sharon Darlene Hansen, 2605 Blanshard, returned before Judge William Ostler in provincial court Friday on charges of attempted murder and causing bodily harm with intent to wound, maim or disfigure Pearl Hope Eddy.

A psychiatrist testified the accused was capable of understanding what was going on but stated she was mentally ill and should be in a hospital.

She was remanded until next Wednesday to see what arrangements can be made for her.

Feb. 1, 1980, was set for the trial of Kaleidoscope Theatre Productions Society and manager Colin Gorrie.

The society and Gorrie were charged Aug. 3 in connection with the tent theatre operated at Victoria's Causeway.

After numerous run-ins with municipal and provincial fire officials, the theatre and Gorrie were charged with contravening two sections of the provincial Fire Services Act and two city bylaws.

Gorrie pleaded not guilty to all charges on behalf of himself and the society during his first court appearance and Ostler remanded the case until Friday so the lawyer for the defence could be present to set the trial date.

A 19-year-old man was fined a total of $125 after pleading guilty to loitering at night and impersonating a peace officer.

Clarence Kelvin Hummell, of CFB Work Point, was fined $50 on the first count and $75 on the second.

About 1:15 a.m. July 23, Crown counsel Richard Law told the court, Hummell was spotted at the rear of 505 Macaulay where there was a party in progress. Hummell had climbed to the sundeck when he was caught and held by one of the guests.

Hummell produced his military identification card and said he was a military policeman. Esquimalt police were called and Hummell then admitted to officers he heard some music and "wanted to see."

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: James Allen Buckton, 30, of 990 Thomas, $450; Brian William Clark, 21, of 1171 Kings, $400; Roger Dale Mudd, 36, of Bend, Ore., $350; and Cameron Dean Riggs, 20, of 6281 Welch, $350.

$28,076 extra bill for weekly garbage collection

The extra cost of weekly garbage collection for the rest of this year in Oak Bay is $4,201 and for all of next year $28,076, according to a memo by municipal engineer Geoff White.

Council has been considering reverting to year-round weekly garbage collection from weekly in the summer and fortnightly the rest of the year because of continuing complaints by residents.

Oak Bay takes hard look at private tree-cutting law

Oak Bay council is seriously looking at a bylaw which will regulate tree cutting on private property, Mayor Brian Smith said Friday.

He was commenting on a memorandum and draft bylaw which are before a committee of council. No bylaw has been introduced or recommended yet.

Smith said Oak Bay has no bylaw regulating tree cutting.

The draft bylaw says no one shall cut any tree without holding a $5 permit and no permit shall be issued unless the tree is diseased, dead or damaged or presents a danger or the land is required for a building permitted by the zoning bylaw and a building permit has been issued.

The definition of cutting is "the cutting down or removal of a tree by any means but shall not include the beneficial pruning of a tree."

Fines for infractions are given as not less than $50 and not more than $500 for a first offence and for each subsequent offence, not less than $100 and not more than $500.

Hospitals mailed $13M

The British Columbia government is mailing cheques totalling $13 million to hospitals around the province.

A health ministry official said Friday the payments mailed this week are intended to help cover deficits left over from the last fiscal year.

He said an additional $2.6 million will be mailed out in the next two weeks.

The total hospital deficit for the 1978-79 fiscal year will be $23.5 million. In the past, the government has covered two-thirds of the deficit but Health Minister Bob McClelland recently announced his ministry intends to fund the entire deficit remaining from last year.

B.C. reports $242 M surplus

The provincial government reports it has a first-quarter surplus of $242.1 million and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Friday he is cautiously pleased with the performance.

Wolfe's report said the surplus is a full $23.3 million more than he had predicted and $9.3 million higher than the surplus recorded in the same quarter last year.

However, the minister will not hand any of the windfall back to the taxpayer, noting that much of the surplus will be wiped out in the second quarter when spending is expected to outstrip revenues by more than $190 million.

Provincial revenues from April 1 through June 30 totalled $1,235,400,000, or $63.1 million more than forecast. Expenditures were $993.3 million, or $37.8 million more than expected.

Wolfe attributed most of the higher income to strong interest in petroleum and natural gas exploration rights and most of the unexpected spending to earlier payment to municipalities of homeowner credit grants for this year.

Although the surplus will be needed to meet the bills later this year, B.C.'s financial position is solid, he said.

A weak Canadian dollar has spurred foreign demand for B.C. forest and mineral products and attracted droves of budget-conscious tourists.

If the trend continues, "the province's objective of a balanced budget is assured."

The figures showed that revenue from the B.C. Petroleum Corp. jumped almost $26 million to $88.1 million.

Wheelchairs on 4 buses

Wheelchair users will be able to ride transit buses on the Beacon Hill route for the first time starting about Sept. 15.

The pilot project is a first in Canada and provides four B.C. Hydro vehicles which have been converted to raise wheelchairs hydraulically into the front of the bus.

Ald. Bill Tindall, the city's Urban Transit Authority representative, said the program will run for six months to determine whether it may be extended to other routes in Victoria.

A standard Hydro transit bus is used in the conversions which costs $18,000 each. The front doors are widened, two seats are removed to make room for two wheelchairs, and the front steps are replaced with an extendable ramp which can be lowered to sidewalk level and raised with a wheelchair aboard.

In its withdrawn position the ramp folds back into steps.

Tindall said the mechanism is designed to be operated without requiring the bus driver to leave his seat, making it necessary for wheelchair users to be competent to wheel themselves on and off, or to be accompanied by an attendant.

The ramp may also be used to assist the infirm or partially disabled pedestrians.

Tindall said it is hoped the buses will go into service at the same time a proposed fare-free zone is adopted for downtown Victoria when some minor route changes will take place. It will mean 10-minute frequency for the wheelchair buses running to James Bay, an improvement over the current 15-minute schedule.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis initiated the project through a handicapped transportation study committee, and supplied money from the B.C. lottery fund.

Friday clinics to end

Technological change is putting the Red Cross blood service in an awkward position.

At a time when hospital demand for blood keeps rising, the way it is used makes it more difficult to collect and process donations.

One result is the termination of Friday blood clinics in Victoria starting next month, with the exception of one set for Dec. 14 in Newcombe auditorium.

The Red Cross said its future donors will be largely in the Lower Mainland because all whole blood is now separated into components for hospital use, and the only processing laboratory is in Vancouver.

As a result, Friday clinics will be held on the mainland instead of Victoria. And generally, fewer clinics will be held outside of Greater Vancouver where 70 per cent of blood requirements must be met.

August clinics in Victoria area next week are as follow: Monday, Red Cross House, 1046 Fort, 2:30-8 p.m.; Tuesday, Juan de Fuca Arena, 2-8 p.m.; Wednesday, SANSCHA Hall, Sidney, 2-8 p.m.; Thursday, Oak Bay Recreation Centre, 2-8 p.m.; Friday, Naval Reserve Training Centre, Albert Head, 9:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m.

Expedition to plateau

Walking enthusiasts are invited by the local branch of the Canadian Hostelling Association to join an expedition to Forbidden Plateau next Saturday and Sunday.

The group will explore the plateau following an overnight stay at a lodge near Courtenay.

There will be a minimum charge for transportation to and from Courtenay and cost for the overnight stay at the lodge would be $3 a person.

Interested parties should get in touch with Pack and Boot Shop, 720 Yates, or phone 595-4077 evenings.

Balloons really soared

Tags from helium-filled balloons released by 800 children who participated recently in the Great Balloon Race are still being picked up in nearby waters and the Gulf Islands.

One was found as far away as Hope.

The event was part of the Great Victoria Public Library's summer superkids program.

Silver balloons have been awarded at each library branch to: Elizabeth Summerfield, Esquimalt branch, for a balloon found at Tsawwassen; Kelleen Peters, McClung branch whose ballon turned up at Camp Hope in the Interior; Bruce Malfait, central library (Anacortes, Wash.); Jan Walsh, Saanich-Victoria branch (Birch Bay, Wash.); Anna Rasmussen, Oak Bay branch (Hope).

Hearing to air Island Trust zoning

Two Island Trust zoning bylaws aimed at heading off development problems on some Gulf Islands will be aired at a public hearing in Vaughn Birch Hall, 9697 Fourth Street, Sidney, on Aug. 16 at 1 p.m.

The bylaws would increase the minimum size of lots from 10 to 20 acres and limit the number of dwellings.

About 20 islands are involved, including James, Sidney, Forrest and Pender.

The bylaws are expected to be opposed by some large land owners because they would prevent big developments.

One of these is James Island, owned by Canadian Industries Ltd. which once considered selling the island for housing but decided to retain it — for a time — as an explosives distribution point.

Another is Sidney Island, owned mostly by Jack Todd of Victoria, and proposed as a park.

Part of this island, however, is in the Agricultural Land Reserve.

A second bylaw proposes a limit of two dwellings per lot — a permanent house and a cottage.

Trustees believe the bylaw will also help preserve the unique landscape of the islands.

Saanich bids for '83 games

What do they call a country where all the cars are pink?

Fun books made school easier to handle

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

How is a bird on a fence like a nickel? What do you get when you feed lemons to a cat? What do they call a country where all the cars are pink?

Give up? Well, it's too bad you weren't enrolled in the elementary skills program offered by the Greater Victoria School District this summer — you might know all the answers.

There were 400 elementary pupils from Grades 3 to 7 in the program, part of the district's offering of summer courses for students from kindergarten to Grade 12. In all, some 1,600 students took the courses this summer.

Make-up courses accounted for 825 high school students, and credit courses (taken to upgrade a student's academic standing) were taken by 150 senior secondary school students.

There were also 160 youngsters in the summer band program, 48 in a Grade 8 program to insure that basic skills had been learned, and 35 in a driver education courses for certifying drivers.

Although the evaluation testing of the program has yet to be done, the district's director of summertime education, Dave Pitre, says feedback from teachers indicates some startling successes.

Pitre says that in the elementary programs each student was pretested to determine his or her abilities. The teachers were given the students' results ahead of time, enabling them to design personalized programs for each child.

In many cases, parents were involved in the program, enabling them to assist their children at home. Classes consisted of four or five children, thus avoiding the crowd scenes that make it difficult for some children to concentrate.

The children apparently enjoyed the program, and it only took an hour a day, five days a week from July 9 to Aug. 3.

The success of the first year's elementary program, when 120 children were enrolled, was apparent this year, when more than 400 applications were received.

Slipping into the educator's jargon, he said the program featured the "mastery form" of teaching, in which a child is taught a particular skill or subject until he or she has mastered it.

"The program is goal-oriented and success-based," Pitre said.

For the children, being at school in the summer seemed like great fun, especially when educational matter can be made more palatable by such fun books as Read Me a Riddle.

And for those people without children to give them the answers, a chicken on a fence is like a nickel because it has a head on one side and a tail on the other, a cat that eats lemons is a sourpuss, and a country where all the cars are pink is a pink-car nation!

Don't you wish you were back in school?

Beautiful Downtown Cordova Bay's only bank is closing and the residents — particularly the older ones — are upset.

The first notification that many of them got was a letter in the mail Thursday or Friday announcing that, after careful consideration, it had been decided to move the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce's Cordova Bay Plaza branch to the bank's branch at Douglas and View in Victoria.

Final day of business, the letter said, will be Aug. 31.

Oh, there was a notice that had been pasted on a bank window for a week or so but it wasn't even near the main entrance door and a lot of residents didn't see it.

And so the impersonal form letter, which wasn't even dated but was sent over in a batch from Vancouver (where it had been signed by Frank Lussier, the assistant general manager of the Bank of Commerce) and had local customers' names typed at the top, came as a shock to some who had been with the bank for all its 15 years in Cordova Bay.

Accounts would be transferred to the Douglas and View branch, the letter said, "and there will, of course, be no charge for the transfer."

I was phoned by a widow who is over 75 and has lived and banked in Cordova Bay for nine years. She and her late husband had dealt with the Bank of Commerce since 1924 and she has a friend nearby who has stuck with the Commerce since 1929.

"No, I will not be transferred to Douglas and View," she said indignantly. "I have written to Mr. Lussier and I have encouraged many of my friends to write, too, to protest this closure. And I have told him that if we have to change to the nearest bank to us then it will not be a Bank of Commerce."

Trouble is, that would be at Royal Oak and means the elderly either face a rather round-a-bout trip by bus or must get someone to drive them.

"I care about people, Mr. Low, and regularly visit several who are over 85," my caller explained. "Right now they are able to walk down to this bank but they can't get much further. One friend of mine is worried about what she is going to do about her safety deposit box which has things like her will and the deed to her property in it."

And my caller was also worried about the effects this will have on the community.

"All the little stores which are family businesses bank here and they are going to suffer because when people go into the city to bank, they shop there, too," she explained.

Ken and Pat Craig, owners of the Plaza Variety Store, agreed.

"We have four accounts in the bank," Ken said, "and it's a damned inconvenience for them to move out. Let's face it, I could have $2,000 on hand any given night and it's not safe for me to leave that much here. We've already had one break-in recently."

"The whole shopping centre is involved," Pat Craig said. "There are so many elderly people who come here to bank and shop who have no cars and they are all up in arms about it."

The letters gave no reason for the move but Cordova Bay branch manager Ray Hemmett, who was only put in charge of the bank in February, was just as shocked as his customers to learn about it.

"It was a directive from Toronto, something they've been working on for a couple of years," he said. "This is one of eight branches in B.C. that is closing and I've heard rumors that we have 80 across Canada that are packing up."

The woman who phoned me said clerks at the bank tell you it's all because the branch isn't making money. One told her:

"All you old people put in your little pension cheques but you don't take out any loans or mortgages."

"But I feel they have the use of my money and surely such a big banking chain can aford to keep a little one going," the woman said.

It may all be a simple matter of economy to the banking wizards in Toronto but to the elderly residents of Cordova Bay it's a blow to their lifestyle and to their pride.

"We try to be independent," the widow told me. "And then we find we have to be dependent on someone to drive us to the city. With the energy crunch, too, people are being asked to conserve and to drive less. But this makes you drive more.

"It's probably not very businesslike but many of the elderly people helped to build up this country and many are war veterans . . . and I think they deserve a little better treatment in matters like this."

Saanich launches countersuit

The region first - Glazier We're trapped - Couvelier

Regional planning must take precedence over municipal interests, Capital Regional District chairman Murray Glazier said today in the wake of a countersuit launched Friday by Saanich council.

A Saanich bylaw to permit a large shopping centre at Tillicum is being challenged in B.C. Supreme Court by the CRD, and Saanich aldermen voted unanimously to oppose that action and to refuse any municipal responsibility or financial support toward the district's damage suit.

At an emergency meeting aldermen were hostile toward the regional district, which Wednesday voted 10-6 to turn down a compromise on the shopping centre development which had been worked out between Saanich and CRD planning staffs.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said Saanich was trapped in "a vicious, savage, vindictive campaign by some regional board members."

"I can understand the Saanich view," Glazier said this morning. "They see their local interests served by a large shopping centre in the municipality, increasing their tax base. I understand their concern.

"But the board has to protect the wider interests of the regional area, including the western community — which has 25,000 people without a commercial centre of its own — and also the downtown area," Glazier said.

Two prominent objectives of the regional plan are to redirect growth away from agricultural areas and to maintain the commercial dominance of the downtown area, he said.

Downtown Victoria is solid, attractive and caters to "a couple of million tourists a year."

"We can't allow it to be eroded by a large shopping centre in the outskirts," the regional chairman said.

He cited the effect of such a centre on real estate values and on transit service, among other things.

There was no question of this being the right position in the context of regional planning.

"If one of the municipalities wants to put in a centre with an impact beyond its own boundaries, then the plans must be discussed by the representatives from all areas," Glazier said.

He acknowledged that if there is disagreement, the proper way to resolve it is in the courts.

An application will be heard next week to join the private developers in the municipality's counteraction.

Glazier had been confident the joint proposal worked out by the planners would avoid legal action.

"But it didn't turn out that way. The chemistry of the board makes things difficult to predict. There are some very strong feelings represented," he said.

Couvelier went further in his attack on the CRD whose stand he attributed to "the vicious mayoralty in-fighting taking place in Victoria."

Ald. Fred Severson said there is a personal vendetta against Saanich by some CRD directors who refused to recognize Saanich's three-man voice on the board.

He also said former CRD chairman Jim Campbell "won't sit still until he gets Saanich into court."

The proposed development by Cal Investments Ltd. and Tillicum Holdings Ltd. would add $300,000 to Saanich revenue, provide 800 jobs and increase parkland by six acres, according to Cal president James Forsythe, who also said the delay so far had cost more than $1 million.

He added the board was acting irresponsibly and stupid.

Glazier replied the developer's cost is his own business.

"That's not at issue. The issue is regional planning."

STRANGE WAYS of nature produced a paradox uncovered by Bob Geddes while clearing land at Highland Farms, near Prospect Lake. Tire in almost perfect condition and still inflated held up one side of old cart that lay buried in the bush. On the other side only fragments of perished tire and tube clung to rusty wheel. Geddes said the 4.75x20 Simpson tire is a type manufactured about 60 years ago.

Workers collar holdup suspect

A 29-year-old Victoria man was to appear before a justice of the peace in provincial court today charged with the armed robberies of two Safeway stores in Saanich this week.

The suspect was taken into custody just minutes after a man robbed the Safeway store at Town and Country shopping centre late Friday afternoon.

Police said the man was taking a small package of meat and two packages of cigarettes through a checkout counter at about 5:45 p.m. when he pulled a knife and forced the cashier to empty $131 cash from her till into a brown paper bag.

As he was walking out the door, four employees gave chase.

The robber broke into a run, darted across the highway towards Culduthel and was grabbed near the former McDonald's Bakery building.

One Safeway employee held a rock over the man's head while the others called police.

The suspect also has been charged with robbing the Safeway store at University Heights on Tuesday.

Water commissioner fears milfoil

Planes landing on reservoirs

Planes landing illegally on reservoirs in the watershed have Greater Victoria Water District worried about contamination by noxious aquatic plants.

"Our main worry is the transport of aquatic organisms like milfoil," said water commissioner Ron Upward, noting the weed is almost impossible to control once planted.

Upward said there had been two reported instances this year of seaplane violations, but in each case there could have been three or four individual landings. The aircraft apparently fly into the watershed on training flights.

"It's nice and lonely and good to practise on," Upward said.

Many flights probably go unnoticed by patrolmen employed by the watershed to monitor access roads and the main public road on which motorists are required to stay when driving through the restricted area.

Regulations prohibit stopping or turning off the main road and only water board employees are permitted elsewhere in the watershed.

Upward said that as far as aircraft are concerned, the closure is theoretical.

"What can you do, row out and try to stop them from landing?"

Air navigation charts do not show Sooke reservoir and Goldstream Lake as out-of-bounds.

Upward said the board has tried for two years to have the ministry of transport change its charts to indicate to flyers that access is prohibited, as is done with bodies of water in the Vancouver watershed.

The spread of undesirable weeds or other organisms may have already started, if aircraft floats had been contaminated on the mainland, for example at Cultus Lake near Chilliwack. Upward said it might take two years to discover an outbreak in a new location.

There is also the lesser risk of pollution from fuel and oil spewed from aircraft engines at high revolutions on takeoff, he said.

CITY ROWING CLUB SECOND IN REGATTA POINT TOTALS

Victoria girls collect gold

WEARING GOLD MEDALS after Henley triumph are Victoria rowers Lisa Roy and Cheryl Mason.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. — Victoria City and St. Catharines rowing clubs each chalked up two triumphs Friday as the 97th Royal Canadian Henley regatta continued under perfect conditions.

The remaining crowns from the 14 finals were well-distributed as 11 clubs from Canada and the United States shared in the spoils.

Victoria City took the senior women's doubles gold medals as Lisa Roy, 20, and Cheryl Mason, 21, combined to win handily against a field of six.

Another gold-medal triumph for the girls from the British Columbia club came in the junior women's coxed-quadruple sculls. Victoria's crew — Jenny Terpenning, Alix Peden, Sheelagh Lean, Kathleen Alexander and cox Shannon Bennett — edged Boucherville Boat Club of Quebec over 1,000 metres in a two-boat final.

Other Victoria City medals were earned by Terpenning (silver in lightweight women's singles), Doug Moffat (silver in junior men's 145-pound singles), a slver in the junior 155-pound doubles and a bronze in the junior women's doubles.

University of Victoria rowers finished fifth in the lightweight women's eights.

St. Catharines picked up its victories in the junior women's cox-four and Frank Murphy, an 18-year-old university student, took an early two-length lead and held it the rest of the way over the 2,000-metre distance in the junior 145-pound single.

The Boucherville combination of Marie Claude Gaudet and Marie France Bernard won the junior women's double and Toronto's Hanlan Boat Club picked up a victory in the junior 155-pound doubles with Tim Turner and Don Lindsay the victors.

University of Western Ontario from London scored a narrow win against St. Catharines to take the junior quadruple sculls while Hamilton Leander Boat Club collected its second victory in two days by winning the junior 145-pound eight. The same crew took the 155-pound junior event Thursday.

A smooth-stroking Brockville (Ont.) Rowing Club crew easily outdistanced its opposition in the junior 135-pound eight while 29-year-old Sandy Kirby, a former Victoria school teacher, thrashed her opposition to win the junior women's lightweight single for Laval Rowing Club. It was the third Henley medal for the masters physical education student from McGill University in the last three years.

The long trip for Florida Athletic Club's Junior 155-pound four was worth the effort. The Winter Park foursome handled its competition with ease in winning the club's first-ever Henley medal.

In the Maple Leaf trophy standings, given for the aggregate points championship, St. Catharines leads after two days of finals with 148 points.

Victoria City holds second place with 108 points and Hamilton Leander with 63, University of Western Ontario with 61 and Kingston with 58 round out the top five. Detroit is the top American club with 54 points and sixth place.

The Henley has attracted 76 clubs from Canada, the U.S., Mexico and Australia this year.

Rowing edict keeps champs from Henley

JOHN ALEXANDER
. . . angered by officials

One of this country's best scullers — Victorian John Alexander, who won or shared four titles in the recent Canadian rowing championships in Welland, Ont. — is back in Victoria even though the Canadian Royal Henley, North America's biggest and most prestigious regatta is on this weekend at St. Catharines, Ont.

Truth is, Alexander, president of the Victoria City Rowing Club, was prevented from competing at Henley by Canadian Amateur Rowing Association (CARA) officials, as were several other club members. And he's pretty mad about it.

The club, you may recall, had its share of problems even before it set off for the east. There wasn't enough funding to pay for transportation of their boats and it looked for a while as though some of the younger rowers wouldn't be able to make it. Then the United Commercial Travellers of Victoria stepped in with a generous donation of $1,000 and a group of 19 young men and women athletes and officials left for Welland.

The VCRC did better than any club in the country, capturing 10 gold medals and five silvers.

Then clubs were told that all crews winning a title would not be allowed to row for their clubs at the Royal Canadian Henley Regatta. That eliminated all three of Victoria's top doubles combinations, Alexander and Phil Haggarty in the lightweights (under 155 pounds), Bruce Ford and Pat Walter in the heavyweights and Janice Mason and Lisa Roy in the women's.

Some of the younger Victoria rowers stayed to compete, Ford and Walter hung around to watch with Walter hoping he'd be allowed to row in the single sculls. But Alexander was cheesed off and headed home.

"The last thing I heard was when I was helping our club move its boats to Henley," John explained Friday. "We got the boats to the site of the regatta and one of the top CARA officials drove up, rolled down his window and yelled almost viciously 'What the hell are you doing here? You're not rowing in the Henley!'"

The trouble is, CARA's so-called Technical Committee believes that any crews nominated to the national team should rest up and prepare for the upcoming world championships in Bled, Yugoslavia, and ignore the North American scene. But nominated is the key word here as, though they have won titles, none of the rowers concerned have a spot on the team until they make the required standards.

For example, Ford and Walter, recent winners of the double sculls gold medal at the Pan Am Games, won all their races so easily at the national championships that they weren't extended and didn't make the standard of six minutes, 33 seconds for the 2,000-metre course. They could have made it at Henley, had they been allowed to row.

"Now they'll have to go out one evening by themselves and be timed by officials," Alexander said, "and, of course, this is much harder without competition."

And so even Ford and Walter, now internationally-recognized rowers, are not assured of a berth on the national team.

"Bruce and Pat may have rowed their last regatta this year if they don't make the standard," Alexander pointed out. "And they will have sat around and watched the Americans run away with their medal at Henley!"

CARA's Technical Committee has recently had quite a few problems and in the midst of them all, Romanian-born national coaching co-ordinator Tudor Bompa resigned.

Though it's the same kind of situation that exists within just about every amateur sports body in the country, Alexander said it's a real mess and he can't see how the officials can justify banning the top rowers from Henley. And he's worried about what extent they'll go to next season with the Moscow Olympics on the horizon.

"They'll probably ban us from the national championships then, too," he said with only half a smile.

"If the national association is going to take good rowers away and alienate them from their clubs, so they can't compete in local regattas and work with juniors, then I think that in the future clubs are going to be less and less interested in producing this type of athlete," Alexander said.

Oh, Canada! First, we don't come up with any of the money from those marvellous lotteries that are worth singing about every day over the air waves. We make our athletes scrounge around for their own funding, instead. Then, we allow things like this to go on.

Makes you wonder how we ever win a gold medal at anything . . .

Firefighters start play on Sunday

LIBBY, Mont. — Victoria Firefighters received a bye today in the opening round of the Pacific Northwest Senior Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament.

The British Columbia champions swing into action Sunday when they meet the winner of today's game between Oregon and Washinton.

Playing for the team, coached by Al King and managed by Charlie Constable, are Rob Eckstrom, Mike Bull, Perry Walz, Brian Martin, Darryl Richardson, Ian Bishop, Ed Geric, John White, Adrian Holland, Scott McKinty, Russ Mosher, Clay Bertoia, Dale Schmidt, Fred Wedgewood and Craig Gillespie.

Clarke, Watson to assist coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bobby Clarke, Philadelphia Flyers' captain who led the way to two straight Stanley Cup championships, has been named a playing-assistant coach of the National Hockey League team.

Flyers also announced at the news conference that former defenseman Joe Watson will rejoin the organization as a part-time assistant coach.

Rick earns three shots at Times tennis crowns

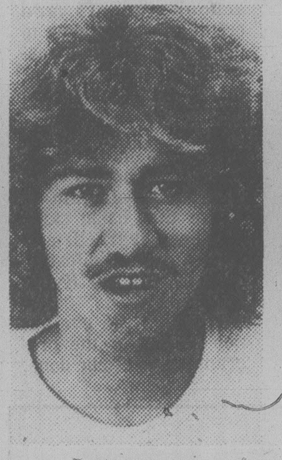
KERRY CHAN



RICK FOLK

HENRY DUCLUZEAU

Seventeen-year-old high school student Rick Folk has a chance to do something no other player has done in the six years of the Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament — win three titles.

Playing with great consistency and a cunning usually associated with older players, Rick has reached the semi-finals of the boys' singles and the quarter-finals of both the men's singles and the mixed doubles.

He had a tough battle with Jay Wilson before winning, 9-7, to reach the semi-finals of the boys' event for the third straight year.

In the men's event, Rick ousted equally-steady Andrew Blair, who had gone through three previous rounds with scores of 6-0, 6-0 each time. The score in the fourth-round match, though, was 6-3, 6-4 to Rick.

Rick and partner Angela Kolic still have to play Eric Dyke and Cindy Bray and the winners advance to the semi-finals of the mixed doubles along with Don and Peggy Howes (9-4 winners over Richard Griffin and Lynn Derry), Larry Christiansen and Susan Moilliet (who beat Jim Parker and Claire Ducluzeau, 6-3, 6-1) and Jay Wilson and Cory Aspden (who ousted Lorne Chan and Monica Jones, 13-11).

Those semis, together with the semis of the other four events, will be played on Saturday, Aug. 18, starting at noon on the Henderson Park courts in Oak Bay. All finals will be played the next day, also starting at noon.

The other semi-finalists in the boys' singles are Kerry Chan, Neil Johnston and Henry Ducluzeau.

Jon Hayward actually defeated Ducluzeau but then it was discovered that Jon is a member of the Racquet Club of Victoria. As the Times tourney is open only to public parks players and not private club members, he has been disqualified and Henry goes through to the semis.

Kerry, who turned 18 since the deadline for the under-18 event, is the favorite after losing to Joe Thompson in last year's boys' final. Coached for three years by Celia Cousens, Kerry breezed past Gord Redlin, 9-0, in the quarter-finals.

In the semis, Kerry will play Neil Johnston, younger brother of Glenn Johnston, who was knocked out of the boys' singles but is still alive in the men's event. Henry Ducluzeau, a 16-year-old Grade 12 student at Reynolds who is making his first appearance in the Times tourney, will play Rick Folk.

Neil Johnston had one of the toughest battles in the summer-long tournament before edging Steven Colwell, 2-6, 7-5, 6-4.

Brother Glenn also had a hard fight with William Stevenson, winning, 6-2, 5-7, 6-2, to reach the last eight out of a starting field of 118 in the men's singles. He meets the winner of a match not yet played between Robert Exell and Joe Thompson.

And the other quarter-final matchups will be Larry Mais versus Kent Campbell, Folk versus Lorne Chan and Kerry Chan against John Zanic.

Mais pulled off the biggest upset of this year's tournament by shocking top seed Perry Evans, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, to reach the quarters. Campbell defeated William Wong, 9-3, Lorne Chan beat Ron Williams, 6-2, 7-6, and Kerry Chan downed George Stewart, 9-1.

Carolyn Jones, Peggy Howes, Noreen Walmsley and Charlayne Joe have already reached the semi-finals of the women's singles while the girls' singles semi-finalists are Janine Prince, Carol Lauzon, Angela Kolic and Joan Thomas.

There's still a tough road ahead for young Rick Folk but with that same consistency he has shown, he just could win three titles and set a Times tourney record. Only one player so far has won two titles in the same summer and that was former Hungarian tennis instructor Elvira Kapus, who in 1977 took the womens singles and then, with partner Alex Shane, the mixed doubles.

Joe pads his portion of brotherly Xmas gift

By Canadian Press

Joe Niekro has come up with the ideal Christmas present for his parents — 20-victory seasons for each of their major league baseball sons.

Joe moved a step closer to that mark Friday night when he became the major league's first 16-game winner as Houston Astros edged Atlanta Braves 2-1 on Art Howe's two-run single in the eighth inning.

His brother, Phil, workhorse of Atlanta Braves' staff, will go for his 15th victory Sunday in the finale of a three-game series between the Astros and Braves.

"I don't really like to think about it, but you've got to think about it a little," Niekro said. "It would be great to look up and see two brothers both winning 20 games. It would be a great Christmas present to Mom and Dad."

In other games, San Diego Padres edged the Reds 3-2; New York Mets topped Montreal 7-1 before the Expos came back to take the nightcap, 6-5; Philadelphia split with Pittsburgh, the Phillies winning 4-3 and the Pirates 3-2; St. Louis Cardinals took two from Chicago Cubs, 13-8 and 5-3; and Los Angeles Dodgers blanked San Francisco Giants, 9-0.

Meanwhile in the American League, Baltimore manager Earl Weaver had both New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner and manager Billy Martin fuming after the Orioles pulled out an 8-6 victory.

With two on and two in the seventh inning, and Baltimore trailing 6-4, Weaver protested when New York pitching coach Art Fowler tried to visit Ron Davis before he delivered a pitch after replacing Tommy John.

Martin, in turn, protested what he considered stalling tactics by Weaver and later chided the Baltimore skipper for trying to intimidate Davis by having umpires check the laces hanging from the rookie's glove.

Eddie Murray, the first batter faced by Davis, hit a two-run double on a 0-2 pitch to tie the score and then scored on Lee May's single.

"I'm not mad at Weaver — he's smart," Steinbrenner said.

Martin added: "He's getting away with something he shouldn't be getting away with. The next time he goes through his antics, I'm going to pull my team off the field until the umpires say they're ready to play."

In other games, Boston Red Sox downed Milwaukee Brewers 5-4, Cleveland Indians dumped Texas Rangers 6-1, Kansas City Royals swept two from Detroit Tigers, 7-6 and 7-3, Oakland A's edged Minnesota Twins 6-5 in the opener but dropped the nightcap 3-2, while Seattle Mariners outlasted California Angels 8-6 in 14 innings.

Oh stretches home-run mark

TOKYO (AP) — Sadaharu Oh broke his own Japanese home run record today with a blast that gave him 20 for the 18th consecutive baseball season as Yomiuri Giants beat Yokohama Taiyo Whales 3-0.

It was also the 825th homer of his career for the 39-year-old first baseman, who has hit 30 or more homers in the last 17 seasons, including three with 50 or more.

Mussels walk past Medford

MEDFORD, Ore. — Only one of the team's five hits figured in Victoria's scoring Friday night as the Mussels posted a 4-3 Northwest League baseball victory over the Medford A's.

Medford pitchers helped sink their own boat by walking 10 batters, including seven in the first four innings.

Mussels scored two unearned runs on one hit in the second and added two more in the fourth on four walks and Tom Dorsey's sacrifice fly.

Victoria right-handers Cal Beal and Tom Candiotti combined to hold Medford to six hits.

Tennis, golf hit

NEW YORK (AP) — The Colgate-Palmolive Co.'s decision to slash its funding of professional sports will drastically change men's tennis and, to a lesser degree, both men's and women's professional golf.

The budget cut, undertaken by company president Keith Crane, comes to about $2 million. The company will discontinue after this year its backing of the Grand Prix tennis tour, three Ladies Professional Golf Association tournaments and three men's golf events.

Soccer Timbers troubled

Times News Services

Portland Timbers' North American Soccer League match against Los Angeles Aztecs Sunday could turn out to be more than just the last game of a sad 1979 season.

"We have a board meeting scheduled next week. We either have to figure out a way of how to sell or restructure," team president Don Pollock said Friday. "If we don't, then this team could move out of town."

Oregon Soccer Inc., which owns the Timbers, is expected to lose $500,000 this year.

Thirsks posing threat to Budget domination

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Vancouver Thirsks, quite obviously, aren't impressed with past records.

Victoria Budgets are the reigning Pan-American Games men's softball champions and the title defenders at both the provincial and national level, but insofar as Thirsks are concerned, this is another year.

Budgets move to Port Alberni next weekend in a bid to bring Victoria a ninth straight British Columbia championship and Thirsks will be one of five teams challenging Budgets' reign.

And the challenge became something of a distinct threat after the Vancouver squad split Friday's Northwest International League doubleheader at Royal Athletic Park.

With Glen Langsett, Ken Larson and Rick Swift sharing pitching duties in both games, Thirsks clipped Budgets 6-2 before the Victorians bounced back for an 8-0 victory.

In both games, the Victoria squad looked flat. The defence sputtered in both and the offense seemed troubled in the first game.

Budgets' main plus sign was the pitching of Dave Ruthowsky, coming on in relief in the opener, and southpaw Mark Smith, who struck out 14 while recording a five-hit shutout in the nightcap.

But the obvious conclusion drawn Friday is the fact that next week's challengers in the provincial tournament could be serious threats to Victoria's long domination.

While Thirsks also had defensive problems, committing three errors in each game, they indicated they could be a problem. And any problem, in the unpredictable and short tournament series, could be damaging.

In addition to Thirsks and Budgets, next weekend's field includes Port Alberni Athletics, Clearbrook Four-Stars, New Westminster Royal Towers Blues and New Westminster Wood's Hotel.

As the B.C. draw has it, Victoria opens against Four-Star, another NWIL rival, next Saturday morning. If successful, the Budgets then have to meet the bye-drawing Thirsks in the afternoon.

Thirsks touched Victoria pitching for 11 hits in Friday's opener, including three by catcher Bruce Jeffery and two each by Rick Pimlott, Gord Alderman and Clark Winterton. The latter also collected two of the five hits of Smith in the second game.

Outfielder Dennis Eckert sparked Budgets' successful attack in the nightcap with three hits and three runs-batted-in. He was the only Victorian to get more than one hit in support of Smith. Sonny Phillips contributed a two-run double and Alden Govenlock, who had two hits in the opener, added a two-run single.

Four B.C. reps win final berths

DELTA, B.C. (CP) — Four British Columbia teams have advanced to the finals of the Canadian bantam lacrosse championships being played in this Vancouver suburb.

In the "A" division semi-finals Friday, North Delta narrowly defeated New Westminster 10-9 to advance to the final against Kitimat, which outscored Saskatoon, 16-8.

Whitby, Ont., advanced to the final of the "B" division with an 11-4 victory over Vancouver, and will play Richmond, a 16-5 winner over Coquitlam.

In the "C" division semi-finals, Burnaby trounced Brampton, Ont., 18-8 and Peterborough, Ont., defeated Vancouver, 13-6.

All three finals were scheduled today.

Bellies lead

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — New Westminster Salmonbellies got a big jump on Richmond Roadrunners in their Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League semi-final series Friday night, winning two games.

The Salmonbellies got six goals and six assists from league scoring leader Rob Dalzell to defeat Richmond 19-9 in the regularly scheduled game.

Before that game, the two teams finished the final 2:42 of the game called Tuesday night after a bench-clearing brawl. There was no scoring in that time and New Westminster, which had to use a defenceman in goal after both goalkeepers were tossed out of the game Tuesday, won the contest 10-5.

The two wins gave the Salmonbellies a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with third game to be played tonight in Richmond.

Gord Hardeman scored three goals for New Westminster in the second game Friday night while Brian Cowie and Paul Kirkpatrick each tallied twice.

Jim Northey and Rob Grant scored twice for Richmond which was outshot 63-37.

Swedish ace signed

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — General manager Bill Torrey of New York Islanders has announced the signing of Swedish forward Anders Kallur, the most-valuable hockey player in his country last season.

Bow records still falling

LAKE EDEN, Alta. (CP) — The largest-ever field of 228 at the 49th annual Canadian archery championships cracked another eight open and Canadian records Friday as marksmen struggled for spots on the 12-member Canadian team going to the All-Americas field championships in Mexico this October.

Chris Smith, 17, of Harvey Station, N.B., moved into third-place in the men's freestyle on Friday, replacing Wayne Pullen of Dorchester, Ont. Pullen had been a team qualifier until Friday's round.

Stan Siatkowski of Toronto maintained his lead in the men's freestyle with 1,034 points, followed by Roger Lemay of Boisbriand, Que., with 1,012.

Lemay's wife Lucille kept her lead in the women's freestyle with 2,326 of a possible 2,640 points while adding another record to the Canadian mark she established Thursday in the FITA (world-class) event.

Joan McDonald of Toronto followed at 2,292 points and Marty Cusson of Quebec City replaced Jean Mainland of Ottawa in third.

Among the archers setting records Friday were Peter Sager of Victoria, who is leading the cadet boys' barebow event, and Bob Schlase of Surrey, the junior boys' barebow leader.

Top four net stars in U.S. Open semis

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Top-seeded Jimmy Connors isn't interested in the tactics he expects from Spain's Jose Higueras in their semi-final match at the $275,000 United States Open clay court tennis championships today.

"He likes long marathon matches," said Connors, who won here for the third time last year with a 7-5, 6-1 decision over Higueras in the title match.

"I'll just have to go out and play my game," he said. "I don't enjoy playing baby tennis . . . just staying back there (at the baseline)."

The four top-seeded men advanced to the semi-finals with victories Friday. Connors overpowered 1978 Junior Wimbledon champion Ivan Lendl, 6-2, 7-6. John McEnroe, No. 2 seed, eliminated three-time champion Manuel Orantes of Spain, 6-3, 6-3. He'll meet No. 3 Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, a 6-3, 7-6 winner over fellow countryman Jose-Luis Clerc, in the other semi-final.

Vilas had defeated Mel Purcell, Van Winitsky and Tomaz Smid earlier.

"I'm pleased with the way I'm playing," Vilas said. "I haven't lost a set in the tournament, so I must be doing something right."

In women's action, four-time winner Chris Evert Lloyd plays one of her long-time rivals, Evonne Goolagong, for the $20,000 cheque that goes to the champion tonight.

Lloyd, unable to compete here since 1975 because of her World Team Tennis commitment, gave her strongest performance of the week in defeating Renee Richards, 6-1, 6-0. Lloyd, the top seed, needed only 69 minutes to eliminate Richards, the former male doctor playing in the semi-finals of a major national tournament for the first time.

Goolagong, who trails Evert Lloyd 19-12 in head-to-head tournament action since 1974, rallied to down Regina Marsikova, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5. The 28-year-old Australian native was down 2-5 in the final set, and Mariskova had her at match point three times.

Goolagong, who lost to Evert Lloyd 6-3, 6-2 in the semi-finals at Wimbledon in their only previous meeting this year, was confident she could end her opponent's streak of 25 consecutive match victories here.

"I'm sure she'll try and keep me on the baseline," Goolagong said. "If I play well, I'm confident about my chances."

Ceejay Hathy gets first win

Ceejay Hathy, starting for the 41st time this year, came from behind in the stretch Friday to chalk up her first victory of the season at Sandown Raceway.

The four-year-old mare, trained and driven by Raleigh Wiseman, had been to the post 22 times before at Sandown.

Ceejay Hathy caught Baroness Love just in time to win the third race in a time of 2:07 4/5 for the mile, more than four seconds better than its previous best winning time.

Little Duster picked up its third win of the Sandown season during the first race.

And, in the driving competition, Keith Linton gained a little on Joe Hudon, collecting three victories and one show finish in five starts. Hudon won once, placed twice and showed once in five drives.

The biggest Exactor on the card came in the sixth race when Jocko Tomahawk and Casper Counsel combined for a $193.70 payout.

Rookie grabs tourney lead

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Rookie Beth Daniel fired a two-under-par 71 Friday to take the lead at the halfway mark of a Ladies Professional Golf Association $100,000 tournament at the Meadow Brook Club.

Daniel was at two-under 144. Jerilyn Britz, winner of the United States Open earlier this year, tied for second with Murle Breer at even-par 146. Breer, who completed her round after a 45-minute rain delay, had a 71, one stroke better than Britz shot Friday on the 6,460-yard, par-73 layout.

Judy Rankin, the defending champion who opened the four-day event with a 76, moved into a tie for fourth with Jane Blalock, Sally Little and Kathy Ahern, the first-day leader, at 147. Rankin had a 71, Blalock a 74, Little a 71 and Ahern soared to a 76.

Kathy McMullen, who had the best round Friday, a four-under 69, was at 184 along with Cathy Morse, Donna Caponi Young and Elaine Hand.

Dale Shaw of Victoria, with a second-round 76, made the cut by five strokes with a total of 158.

Big George shows speed

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — George Cadle was the front-runner Thursday in the $300,000 Greater Hartford Open golf tournament, but found himself running for his life Friday.

Cadle and his caddy made a mad dash for the clubhouse at the Wethersfield Country Club as a sudden, violent thunderstorm hit the course in late afternoon.

Winds reaching 115 kilometres an hour and hail turned the course into a sea of panicked spectators and debris. Several tree limbs were felled by wind and lightning on the course, but no injuries were reported.

"That's the fastest I've run in years," the 5-foot-11, 230-pound Cadle said in the clubhouse.

The storm left 69 players unable to finish their second rounds Friday. The tournament was scheduled to resume this morning with the completion of the second round, with the third round in the afternoon.

Cadle managed to complete 12 holes Friday before the halt and was eight-under-par.

But Cadle lost the lead as veteran J. C. Snead completed his round — a 66 — for a 36-hole total of 11-under 131.

Snead, who birdied four of the last six holes, played during the morning before the strong winds moved in.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lie low, go slow, study Libra message. Accent on legal ties, including partnership and marriage. Avoid direct confrontations. If cautious, observant, you can emerge a winner. The choice is your own. Patience is your ally.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spotlight on short trip, call or message which could result in a delightful evening. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius — and the number 5 — figure prominently. Relative attempts to "start an argument." Display sense of humor.

IF AUGUST 13 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY ... you were "on your own" early, in an actual or psychological sense. You are creative, rebellious, original, a creator of your own traditions. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons play important roes in your life. Emotional pressures are relieved in October. Holiday spirit could prevail. Social life accelerates. Horizons expand. Your potential is tremendous. Recent experiences have shown you that those who promise the most might give the least. A Cancer native is due to become a valuable ally. If singl, marriage could be in picture. You are going to feel more secure in your abode. During the remainder of August, maintain independent stance, imprint style and be receptive to love.

Senior test at Oak Bay

An impressive lineup of challengers may make things difficult for Bill Thompson.

The Victoria Golf Club veteran has made the Seniors North West Golf Association's championship something of a personal picnic since becoming eligible for the 55-and-over class.

Thompson has won the event, held annually at the Oak Bay course, five times in the past nine years.

Among the limit entry of 230 ready for the qualifying rounds of the 57th test are several ready to challenge the defending-champion's domination. They include clubmate George Bigelow; Ken Newbury of Vancouver; Erv Parent, Dick Munger, Walter Daggett and Arnold Groth, all of Seattle; George Weston, Jr., of Portland; Herman Dahl of Tacoma, and Keith Welts, the 1977 and '78 finalist from Seattle.

Because of the large entry, some contestants will play qualifying rounds Sunday. The rest start Monday with shotgun starts at 8:30 a.m. and 1:15 p.m.

As a prelude, the international United States-Canada match will be played Sunday, starting at 11 a.m.

Smith swims to easy victory in first event

EDMONTON (CP) — To Graham Smith, the real competition is not at the Canadian national swimming championships.

But to qualify for the two big events coming up, the Edmonton swimmer had to win in the national championships. This he did easily, in the first event he entered Friday night, men's 100-metre breaststroke.

Smith, 21, created Commonwealth Games history last year when he became the first swimmer to win six golds. This he did in the same Don Smith Pool in the Commonwealth Aquatic Centre named after his late father.

Among other records, Smith holds the Canadian record in 100-metre breaststroke, 1:03.06. He didn't need that to win Friday. Still, his time of 1:03.89 was almost two seconds ahead of silver medallist Dave Miller of Etobicoke, Ont.

The events Smith is looking forward to are the Canada-Soviet Union meet in Moscow next week and the Federation Internationale de Natation Amateur (FINA) Cup in Tokyo early next month.

Only the gold medallists at the national championships will go to the FINA Cup. The top two in each event will represent Canada in the Moscow meet.

"I want to get top-notch competition," Smith said of the international events.

But he was pleased with winning back the Canadian title. He didn't compete in the event last year.

Besides Smith, most other pre-meet favorites also won their respective events. Mid-way through the four-day championships, only one Canadian record had been set. That happended Thursday in men's 4x50-metre medley relay, when an Etobicoke Swim Club team from Ontario came in 1:45.04.

The only event in which a Canadian record came close to be broken Friday was women's 100-metre freestyle. Defending champion Anne Jardin of Pointe Claire, Que., took the gold in 57.21, 4-100th of a second shy of the record of 57.17 set last year by Gail Amundrud of Vancouver.

Amundrud, who said she is not in her best shape, failed to make the final.

Plan splits Episcopals

DALLAS (UPI) — A proposal to throw out more than 400 years of tradition for the sake of modernization in a "deadly preoccupation with mechanics" is dividing the Episcopal Church, a priest said Friday.

The Rev. K. Logan Jackson, 29, said the issue involves what prayers the church's three million members should use and already has led to a number of people leaving the church.

The number of defections could rapidly rise next month, he said, if the church's leadership at the 1979 convention gives final approval to a new set of prayers to replace the 1928 Book of Common Prayer, which contains essentially the same liturgy used since 1549.

"For the sake of unity in the church and reconciliation we are arguing for retention of the 1928 book," said Jackson, president of the 120,000-member Society for the Preservation of the Book of Common Prayer. "We want the old book to be an alternative."

Jackson, after a strategy session with society supporters prior to the church's 1979 general convention, to be held Sept. 9-20 in Denver, said a Gallup Poll shows 71 per cent of the church members want the freedom to use both the old and new books, but few realize it will take special convention action to allow use of the old book without penalty.

The majority of the church's clergy, however, prefer the more modern version and are unaware of their parishoners' strong feelings about the 1928 book, Jackson said. The church's presiding bishop, the Rt. Rev. John Allin, favors use of both books, Jackson said, however.

"The gulf in the church is just immense between the sheep and the shepherds," he said. "The church has lost three-quarters of a million members in the last 10 years. Certainly, we would say the prayer book issue largely contributed to it."

Jackson said the church's convention, which will be attended by the 130 members of the House of Bishops and the 742 members of the House of Deputies (of which only 371 are lay members), will take a second, final vote on the new book first approved at the 1976 convention. Although his group originally was formed to fight the new book, Jackson said the group now simply wants to allow a choice.

"We're conceding the new book will become the standard," he said. "But for the sake of unity within the church, we feel the old one also should be allowed."

Jackson said the new book is comprised of "bits and pieces" of revised liturgy and prayers used for the past 12 years but also contains previously unused matter.

"This new book, new revision is a radical departure from any of its predecessors," he said.

The new book, he said, contains such new things as making confession optional and allowing lay people to hear confessions.

"For 400 years there has been one set form for things and the new book contains, according to computer figures, 3,000 different ways to celebrate Holy Communion alone," he said.

Membership decline slows for Lutherans

ST. LOUIS — Membership figures for 1978 in The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod indicate a decline, but far less than in 1977.

In 1978, baptized membership declined by 24,645, to 2,742,313. The number of total congregations at year's end 1978 was 6,023, down by 28. This compares to losses of more than 83,000 members and 152 congregations in 1977, the year that most losses occurred as a result of the Synod's recent doctrinal controversy.

On the "plus" side, total contributions from throughout the church amounted to an all-time high of $397,621,267, nearly $31 million over 1977, for an 8.5 per cent increase. This represents a per-member average yearly contribution of $195.29, among the highest of any church body. Also on the rise was total adult Bible class attendance, at 356,675, or 9,244 higher than 1977.

The number of confirmed members for 1978 was 2,036,011, amounting to 16,069 less than the previous year. Sunday school enrollment also fell for the year from 594,309 to 578,952, a difference of 15,347.

"Membership loss should be a deep concern to each and every person in the Synod," President J.A.O. Preus said.

Preus said the increased contributions indicated that "the over-whelming majority of our members have put aside the past and are about our business as a church on the move, making a mark on society, as we move forward in mission and ministry."

He noted that although membership giving seemed to keep up with the rate of inflation for congregational programs, that did not hold true for Synod and District programs. "It is especially difficult, if not impossible, to move onward and expand programs with the present economic realities," he said. "But I am convinced that as our people catch the vision of what the church really can do in this and future ages, God will keep opening doors for His work through the dedicated people in The Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod."

Archer at Emmanuel Church for 13 years

Norman Archer, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church for more than 13 years, is leaving Victoria to enter a new phase of ministry in Calgary.

In September, as he starts his 25th year of ministry, Archer assumes the pastoral leadership of his fourth church, Calgary First Baptist, Canada's largest Baptist church.

Archer was born 47 years ago near London, England. After serving four years as an executive officer in Her Majesty's Stationery Office he became convinced he should be a preacher of the gospel.

AS A RESULT, he entered London University in 1953 where he received his ALBC degree in 1957. After graduation, Archer became pastor of the historically rich St. James Road Baptist Church in Watford, Hartfordshire, England.

In 1962, Archer was invited to come to Canada by the Baptist Union of Western Canada. Following four years as pastor of Parkview Baptist Church in Surrey, the Archers came to Emmanuel in Victoria.

PASTOR ARCHER is well known as a sparkling speaker at graduations, civic clubs, banquets and seminars. But he is more revered and loved by Christians who have been challenged and encouraged by his profound exposition of scripture.

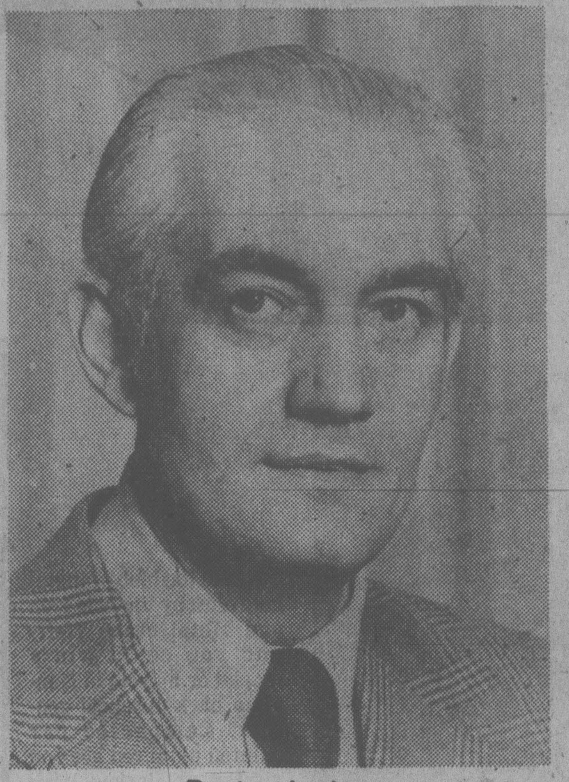
A preacher and a teacher par excellence, his capabilities as a speaker are the result of disciplined study and hard work. His wife, Mary, relates that Norman studies nightly between 2 and 4:30 a.m. Although running on four hours of sleep his enthused spirit never flags.

ADDED TO his preaching-teaching responsibilities at Emmanuel, he leads a fine team of four pastors. His emphasis on church renewal and growth has resulted in Emmanuel sending Archer to other parts of Canada and the world.

During the past three years Archer has had numerous speaking engagements in Canada and the U.S. at church seminars, conventions, pastoral conferences and Christian camps.

THE LATTER locally include Sylvan Acres, Keats Camp and The Firs.

His rapport with university students is evident in his times of speaking at Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship meetings and his annual two-week course at the Baptist leadership training school, Calgary. He has travelled to speak and teach about church renewal in India, Britain and Jamaica.



Pastor Archer

Archer, who is on the board of governors at Regent College and Carey Hall, Vancouver, and the Home Bible League of Canada, will have two books published by Herald Press in the near future.

TO QUOTE his wife, he is "a singular-minded man." His determination is graphically demonstrated in his progressive and liberating leadership of Emmanuel Baptist Church.

The church has grown from a handful at the Fernwood location (now the Belfry Theatre) to a vibrant, pulsating congregation which ministers to 2,000 family members. It is strategically located across from the University of Victoria campus.

THE ARCHERS have five children: Paul, 19, Tim, 18, Jonathan, 14, David, 9 and Elizabeth, 7.

Archer is proud of his family, enjoying them all, preferably one at a time.

This is certainly characteristic of his humble and shy personality. The paradox of the preacher who is uneasy in crowds, simply exemplifies Archer's approach to life found in II Corinthians 12:9, "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness."

CERTAINLY, his life companion of 22 years, whom many call "Mary-full-of-grace," is a vital support. She says, "My ministry is to Norman." Mrs. Archer has been "mom" to more than the Archer children.

Theirs is an open home refuge for many waifs and strays, drug addicts, unwed mothers and runaways.

These "needy ones" have known motherly love from Mary, a native of the Okanagan and a graduate of the Royal Columbian Hospital School of Nursing, New Westminster.

ARCHER'S spiritual and emotional strength along with Mary's gentle yet firm spirit have made a profound impression on many lives in Victoria.

These servants of God take delight in helping people to "be trusted again by God in the place where they've failed." Victorians will miss them.

A community appreciation service, to which all are welcome, will be at Emmanuel Baptist at 7 p.m. Aug. 19, reception following.

Bible, foods daily menu

The Victoria Seventh-day Adventist Church is holding a vacation Bible school designed to meet the physical, mental, social and spiritual needs of children.

All children between the ages of 5 and 12 are invited to attend the school at Colwood Community Hall, Monday through Friday this coming week from 8:45 a.m. to noon.

Activities will include a special daily nutrition feature for each age group. The children will learn how to choose healthful foods to make a balanced diet and the older children will prepare simple recipes.

Challenging experiences such as work on individual activity books and crafts will stimulate mental development.

Supervised game periods will be part of the program.

The program will be made complete by studies of spiritual values. The theme this year is The Bible. Daily titles include:

The Bible is God's Letter to Us, The Bible Tells Us About Jesus, The Bible Tells Us That God Cares For Us, The Bible Tells Us About Sin and Forgiveness, The Bible Tells Us How to Be Happy.

Director is Mrs. Gayle Haeger. Junior leader is Gerald Haeger. Primary leader is Mrs. June Broussan. Kindergarten leader is Mrs. Eleanor Wyness.

Crafts will be directed by Mrs. Mollie Magsalin and Mrs. Pat Penner. The nutrition feature will be directed by Mrs. Shirley Oakley.

The graduation services will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. in the Colwood Community Hall. The community is cordially invited.

For further information or pre-registration call Mrs. Haeger, 479-9578, or register at door.

Perspectives

By Rev. J.H. Davidson

A few years ago a woman I was chatting with at a church gathering told me about her nephew, a young man in his final year at theological college.

"He's not planning to enter the ordinary parish ministry," she said, "but hoping to go into a wider field of service." Before I could think of a suitable and not too rude reply, she added, "But of course he always has been clever."

For some years now, two words have been frequently used in discussions of the Christian ministry, "relevant" and "exciting" and they have been used to point to what generally the ordinary parish ministry isn't and what is found mainly in the new forms of ministry which are developing outside the conventional congregation.

The holy text for those who think along such lines seems to be a sentence on a book published in the early sixties, The Noise of Solemn Assemblies, written by Peter L. Berger, an American sociologist who specializes in religious institutions: "The sharp edge of the Christian engagement with the modern world is not likely to be made in the parish."

Unfortunately for many of the clergy who feel they should be serving in wider fields—in full-time counselling, in various exercises in social activism, in special enterprises in communications, in denominational bureaucracies—there aren't enough jobs in those fields for all of them.

I can understand why some of my brothers and sisters in the ministry are not enthusiastic about parish service. The ordinary parish ministry is more difficult and demanding and frustrating than it was in the not very distant past.

But a new approach seems to be developing with respect to the parish, the congregation, the local church. Hans Kung, influential Roman Catholic theologian, reflecting the decisions of the Second Vatican Council, has written that the local church "is in no way to be seen as a subdivision of the real Church" and that "the whole Church can only be understood in terms of the local church and its concrete actions; the local church is the real Church." No theologically informed Protestant will quarrel with that.

At the practical level we must recognize that the local church is the economic base for the whole Church's engagement with the world. In the United Church of Canada, for instance, about 90 per cent of the money used in its wider work and mission comes off the collection plates passed each Sunday in its 4,271 congregations. It is a hard economic fact that "relevance" and "excitement" in the Christian engagement are paid for by those whom some critics judge to be irrelevant and unexciting.

A creative Christian presence in the world cannot, of course, be sustained and expressed only in the local churches. The Church must develop its specialized ministry and mission, and search for more places of engagement with the world. But if there is no effective engagement in and through and from the local churches there will be in the end no effective Christian engagement anywhere. As Father Kung said, "The local church is the real Church."

(Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

10th in open air

James Bay United Church will be in charge of the tenth in the series of 12 open-air gospel services for the summer at 7 p.m. Sunday at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park.

Minister Rev. Bert Forsythe will conduct the service and deliver the gospel message.

The musical program will include a singalong, and selections by the church choir with Connie Forsythe as featured soloist. A musical group from the Cordova Bay United Church will participate.

The services are sponsored by Park Services Interdenominational.

Clark sets talks with provinces

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark has written to the 10 premiers suggesting a round of federal-provincial meetings this fall to discuss energy and other economic problems.

The letters, dated July 26 and made public Friday, suggest that intergovernmental, finance and energy ministers from both levels of government meet in September and October to lay the groundwork for a three-day conference in November attended by Clark and the premiers.

The November conference would discuss the supply, conservation and pricing of energy, the economy in general, ways of improving federal-provincial relations and ways to improve the effectiveness of government services while reducing the cost.

This meeting would be followed by what Clark describes as a national economic conference to be attended by both levels of government and the private sector "to begin work on strengthening our economy."

"In addition, I am expecting that our ministers concerned with constitutional matters will be meeting in the course of the fall and there may be items which they will wish to refer to first ministers for consideration (at the November meeting)."

Clark has been under attack by the Liberals for indicating earlier he would not honor an election promise to convene a federal-provincial constitutional conference this fall.

He now appears prepared to allow discussion on the constitution at the energy and economic conference if the provinces so desire.

Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn is drafting a national energy policy which he hopes to present to the inner cabinet later this month during a meeting at Jasper, Alta.

This policy would likely form the meat of discussions Clark wants him to have with his provincial counterparts before the November conference.

Rail contract settlement fails

OTTAWA (CP) — Conciliation commissioner Alan Gold has admitted failure in his attempt to settle a dispute between 21,000 tradesmen and the major railway companies.

Gold, in a report made public Friday, urged the unions to take another vote on a contract they previously rejected and recommended the establishment of an industrial inquiry commission to compare the wages of railway tradesmen with those employed by other industries.

The companies and unions now are studying the report.

If they reject the Gold recommendations, the unions will be in a legal strike position and the companies will be in a legal lockout position Aug. 16.

Gold said 65,000 other railway employees have accepted and ratified the agreement that was rejected by the tradesmen.

Gold said it would be unfair to give the shop craft employees a better deal than their fellow employees.

The companies involved are Crown-owned Canadian National Railways, CP Rail, Dominion Atlantic Railway, Northern Alberta Railways, Ontario Northland Railway, Quebec Central Railway, Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway and Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway.

Jonathan and Kate Parratt, skippers of Thames barge, Actief

On a barge down the Thames

By DAVID BUTWIN

One of the last things I expected to do in England was ride a barge down the Thames. Somehow the idea of a holiday cruise on any inland waterway, whether in England, France, or Holland, where such schemes are rather actively promoted, had always sounded as exciting as watching summer reruns on television.

Yet there I was, floating down this gentle, fabled, and very narrow river on the sun deck of the 98-foot Actief — the largest and probably slowest craft on the upper Thames — wishing my trip were not about to end.

Before you book passage on the next barge or houseboat to Oxford or Burgundy (an outfit called Floating Through Europe, 501 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022 specializes in such trips), be advised that the Actief is one of the rarest of the species. The barge is not only comfortable and clean, it serves perhaps the best food I've eaten afloat since the QE2.

Jonathan and Kate Parratt, the owners and skippers, are an active, attractive English couple in their late 20s who lead shore excursions to all sorts of esoteric corners of the Thames valley and who, on board, encourage passengers to heave a line or take the wheel. (For a schedule, write Actief, Hilton House, Norwood Lane, Meopham, Gravesend, England.)

Cruises run 3, 6, 9, and 12 days on the 100-mile stretch of the Thames above London, but with my time in England running out, I had no choice but to board the Actief in mid-trip and stay only for a day.

I was greeted, even before I met the skipper, by a gladsome couple from Wayzata, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Barney Barton, about to complete a 3-day cruise, said the experience had eclipsed even the glowing review they had read in "England on $15 a Day."

Eating was clearly one of the Bartons' main criteria. And within an hour, having sat down to lunch at a long table in the saloon, I couldn't dispute them.

There was a fluffy egg mousse with devil sauce, a green salad, climaxed by a peach and hazelnut confection called a galette. You eat all meals on board. The culinary inspiration is mostly Kate Parratt's. She has a Cordon Bleu background with more than a touch of galley imagination.

Nikki Young and Pat Jennings, two young women cooks who make up the rest of the four-person crew, not only carry out Kate's creativity, they experiment winningly themselves, mostly with desserts.

While Nikki and Pat are cooking or making beds (there are rooms below for a dozen passengers) and Kate is planning a menu or helping to navigate a tight passage, Jonathan Parratt is in the stern steering this implausible 150-ton craft with a hair-trigger precision that astounds veteran river people.

His task is made tougher by the very lack of experienced sailors on the Thames; he estimates that two of three passing vessels are rental cruisers piloted by relative novices.

Gliding upriver at the Actief's poky four knots, he toots twice to signal an approaching boat he will pass on the left. Yet the boat — flying a Danish flag — fails to yield and we are forced to pass on the right.

Parratt has a business degree from Antioch College in Ohio. He could be taking the tube to work every morning in the City, wearing a pinstripe suit, but his and Kate's dream is to make a go of this one-time Dutch cargo barge, which they spent a difficult year converting to a floating hotel.

Japan's ancient villages

By JAMES FOLEY

UNZEN, Japan (Reuter) — In the volcanic highlands of Kyushu, Japan's southernmost main island and the cradle of Japanese civilization, there still can be found villages and towns that appear untouched by the 20th century.

Farmers bend over rice paddies, pretty girls in persimmon red and bamboo green kimonos trip through parks to tea houses and families clop on clogs to village bath houses for the nightly communal soak with their neighbors.

The scenes in central Kyushu, where relatively few foreigners visit, are reminiscent of the works of the great 18th- and 19th-century color print artists.

Time seems to have stood still here, although only a few hours away from the interior of the island by train are the great coastal industrial cities such as Nagasaki, Sasebo, Fukuoka and Beppu.

In towns like Unzen, Itsuke and Nishimera, families sit crosslegged outside their houses after dinner, watching the gleam of finely-carved stone lanterns emerge out of the growing dusk enveloping their gardens.

In the back lanes of the villages, restaurant owners light up their red or white paper lanterns which advertise their specialities and thirsty men head for their favorite sake house.

At Unzen, a high altitude spa town on the Shimabara Peninsula, a few brave Japanese tourists take a frightening after-dark walk through the acres of steaming volcanic springs and geysers before heading to the hotels.

> "The scenes of central Kyushu, where relatively few foreigners visit, are reminiscent of the works of the great 18th- and 19th-century artists"

In the silence of the mountains, only the sound of the boiling water a few inches from their feet can be heard except at stone beds where blistering steam shoots into the air.

In the hotels, people take communal baths in slightly cooled water drawn from the sulphur springs. The water has stained the stone baths a bright orange.

A strict decorum is required in taking a traditional Japanese bath. Anyone so crass as to actually use soap in the bath would cause a mass evacuation from the tub.

A bather strips in an adjacent room and picks up a small, soft cloth which serves as a combination washcloth, towel and symbol of modesty.

Holding the cloth in front of him, the bather enters the bathroom, which is aswirl with steam, steps past the bath where other bathers are lounging, and sits down on a stool.

After washing his body with water from a tap, the bather enters the bath, which seems only a degree or two less than the temperature required to melt steel.

After a brief soak and an exchange of banalities with his neighbors, the bather exits for a good wash on the stool and then returns for a final, long soak.

The cloth is now used to sponge off the body before the bather dresses in a Yukata, a light, absorbent cotton robe, and clogs.

Kyushu is an ideal place for views of traditional Japanese life. It is both beautiful and wild with animals, including black bears, wild boars and monkeys.

The island, which contains only a little more than 10 per cent of Japan's total population, is considered the cradle of Japanese civilization.

For centuries the island served as a stepping stone into Japan of Chinese and Korean cultural, philosophical and religious influence.

After Japan adopted an isolationist policy in 1635, Nagasaki, two hours away from here by bus, became the only permitted port of call for foreign ships.

This policy changed in 1859 when the U.S. Navy sailed into Tokyo Bay to force a change in the Japanese attitude towards foreigners.

With the traders came Christianity, brought by St. Francis Xavier, and the country's 750,000 Christians are still concentrated in western Kyushu around Nagasaki.

In 1637 during a terrible purge of Christians, 40,000 were killed on this peninsula. Some of them cooked alive in the springs now providing bath watek for Unzen.

Larbro Church, one of Gotland's impressive sights

Gotland is different

VISBY, SWEDEN — If you are a serious collector of islands, as I am, your list will be incomplete until you have been to Gotland, a curious chunk of Sweden lying adrift in the Baltic Sea.

I get the feeling that most Swedes, favoring the sun and sand of Majorca, the Greek Islands and North Africa, never have put down on Gotland, 125 miles southeast of Stockholm.

Thanks to the North Atlantic Drift and other climatological oddities, the island is said to receive more sunshine than any spot in northern Europe. That may not be enough to attract the vacationing masses, but it has helped to make Gotland a summer refuge for Stockholm's intelligentsia.

Writers, artists, politicians and actors have bought ancient cottages and farmhouses amid the green-gold wheat fields, creating something of a Swedish Martha's Vineyard. The actor Max von Sydow has a year-round house on Gotland, and former prime minister, Olaf Palme, has a summer cottage.

It was not just the sunshine and powdery sand dunes that fetched these people, though none will deny that Sudersand on Faro, and Tofta, 12 miles south of Gotland's capital, Visby, are two of Europe's finest beaches.

History, architecture and culture also are part of the mix. Visby, a walled port that prospered in Hanseatic times, calls itself "the city of roses and ruins," and who can argue?

Visby is a walker's dream at any hour. My time was late at night when a lingering dusk washed the stone towers and narrow lanes, and the rose-scented air no longer was punctuated by the clomping of wooden "traskor" (clogs).

One can walk the entire length of the decaying but still intact two-mile wall, which the city fathers built in the 13th century.

For me, the fine old town could be appreciated merely with a gaze from the window of Room 406 of the Visby Hotel, itself partly built from medieval ruins.

My view took in twin church steeples, swallows turning in the fading sky, steep red-roofed houses clinging upward in three stages. It reminded me of a similar view from the Goldener Hirsch Hotel in Rothenburg, in the geart of Germany's Romantischestrasse, though that is where the comparison ends. My room in the Visby Hotel was warren-size, and if you wanted a shower you took the lift to the "bastu" (sauna) in the cellar.

Not all the accommodations on Gotland are so spartan, although the Visby, the 78-room Solhem just outside the town walls, and the seafront Snackgardsbaden, two miles north of Visby, are the only substantial hotels.

Other than its pretty, flower-draped, beachside setting, the Snackgardsbaden is noteworthy for its heated, 50-meter saltwater pool and for the cement footprint left by the former heavyweight boxing champion, Ingemar Johansson. There are, however, thousands of rentable beds in pensions, country cottages and holiday camps, and they are scarce only in July, the traditional Swedish holiday month.

Visby's only church not in ruin is St. Mary's, and it was packed to the rear pews one evening for a rare performance by Max von Sydow.

Von Sydow gave a dramatic reading of works by two Swedish writers, Martinson and Lagerkvist. Of course it was all in Swedish, but I was content to hear the familiar Von Sydow tones, to be a part of this quiet, adoring, mostly Swedish crowd, and to see the deep blue evening sky through the church windows. Such performances are common from mid-July to mid-August while the Visby Festival is on.

Gotland also protects the purity of its countryside. Across the 75-mile-long island, the sparkling grain fields are broken only by pine-needle church spires. Some 70 of these medieval churches still stand. Open grasslands are grazed by Gotland's peculiar charcoal-colored sheep (whose total is supposed to equal the island's human population, 54,000). Near the town of Stanga, site of an ancient Viking athletic festival each August, you may see herds of the half-wild "russ" ponies.

My favorite natural attraction was the beach at Tofta. I still can see pairs of Swedich tourists pedalling out of Visby on rented bikes as early as 8 a.m. on the road to Tofta.

It's more than travel guide

Canada's first illustrated road atlas and touring guide, published by Reader's Digest in conjunction with the Canadian Automobile Association, may turn out to be more than just a useful travel book.

The 408-page Canadian Book of the Road, priced at $24.95, covers 48,000 kilometres of roads, features 1,000 color illustrations and photographs, including 180 regional road unit maps and maps of all major cities and towns.

The well laid out and geographically arranged book is packed with facts and practical information on thousands of attractions across Canada, and it could find its way into classrooms as a handy reference book on history and geography.

Cuzco great for backpackers

A view from the lost Inca city, Machu Picchu

CUZCO, Peru (UPI) — Cheap food and lodging and the lure of the fabled Inca mountain stronghold of Machu Picchu have made the city of Cuzco in the Andes the No. 1 stop on any dedicated backpacker's tour of South America.

The backpackers, Americans, Canadians and Europeans, roll into the 11,150-foot-high former capital of the Inca Empire, after days-long, bone-jarring rides on ancient buses across the Bolivian Altiplano or up through the rugged cordillera from Peru's desert coast.

Most head for dollar-a-night rooms in small pensions to rest and ward off the head-thumping and heart-racing effects of the Andean altitude sickness called "soroche" before hitting the main Plaza de Armas Square to outfit themselves in pseudo-Indian costumes of shaggy alpaca sweaters, gloves, earflap caps and ponchos.

The cool nights bring hundreds of long-haired, blue-jeaned travelers into the square for hours of multilingual gossip, information swapping, guitar and flute playing and self-conscious boasting about who's been to the highest, farthest and most exotic places with the least amount of money.

Hearty food, rest and walks through the narrow, undulating streets of colonial Cuzco, built on massive Inca stone walls, fill the time while the backpackers and more affluent tourists make plans to visit to Machu Picchu, the once-lost Inca city discovered by U. S. historian-archeologist Hiram Bingham in 1911 atop a cloud-shrouded mountain on the western edge of the Andes.

Why the Incas abandoned Machu Picchu 1,500 feet above the swift-flowing Urubamba River still remains a disputed point among archeologists and historians. Many old stone buildings still stand, needing only a thatched roof to make them habitable again.

Tourists can get an introduction into the Inca world by visiting the nearby ruins of the fortress of Sacsayhuaman above Cuzco, the fortifications at Puca Pucara and the "Inca Baths" at Tambomachay.

Taking buses or passenger trucks halfway to Machu Picchu, they can hit the colorful Sunday Indian market at Pisac and the spectacular terraced ramparts of Ollantaytambo, scene of one of the last bloody battles between the Inca rebels of Manco Inca and Spanish horsemen led by Hernando Pizarro, brother of Peru's conqueror, Francisco.

The standard tourist trip to Machu Picchu involves a 70-mile, four-hour train trip through the Inca Sacred Valley of the Urubamba River gorge, a minibus shuttlecock ride up to the ruins, approximately three hours of guided tours and a train trip back to Cuzco.

Budget-minded, backpacking adventurers, however, pay $12 for the slower local train, sharing the crowded cars with bowler-hatted Indian women hauling screaming babies in blankets on their backs and silent, coca leaf-chewing men loaded down with crudely bundled boxes of provisions bought in Cuzco.

The backpackers jump down in the ramshackle, railroad-siding town of Aguas Calientes, one mile from the Machu Picchu station, for a soaking in the local hotsprings and beds in a 50-cent shantytown flophouse before making the arduous trip to Machu Picchu the next day.

Most of the Aguas Calientes crowd spurns the $1.50 minibus ride up the mountain, climbing two hours up to the ruins, plopping their packs in the gatehouse, briefly looking around and heading right on up to the peak of Huayna Picchu, a towering granite peak overlooking Machu Picchu to the north.

Hardier travelers get off the train at Kilometer 88, 14 railroad miles from Machu Picchu, to hike four or five days along the "Inca Trail," the ancient road between Cuzco and Machu Picchu.

The trail runs through verdant, misty valleys, along the edge of towering cliffs and by little-visited Inca ruins at Saycamarca, Phuyupatamarca and Juinay Huayna. Elevations vary by thousands of feet, and the path can narrow to less than three feet along precipices that leave hikers edging along sheer rock faces.

The Inca Trail is generally considered safe for moderately experienced, prudent hikers, but authorities caution that at least three foreigners are believed to have disappeared on the trail during the last 18 months.

Unforgetable trip

MACHU PICCHU, Peru — No tourist to Peru should miss a visit to the once-lost, Inca mountain stronghold of Machu Picchu.

Even the most-basic tourist daytrip can be unforgetable, but following these travel tips can help avoid hassles and make the experience more rewarding:

—Round-trip train tickets from Cuzco should be purchased one day prior to departure to avoid a last-minute sellout, and tourists should be at the station at least a half-hour before the posted time of departure.

—Make sure to only buy a one-way ticket if planning to stay overnight at Machu Picchu. Train tickets are good only on the day of issuance, and the return part of a ticket will be invalid on the second day.

—Tourists who want to spend more than the normal three or four hours at the ruins should book overnight reservations in the small Machu Picchu hotel, which has only about 50 beds, far in advance. An overnight stay can give visitors many extra hours to wander through the ruins when they are not crowded by a trainful of tourists.

—Be ready to hop off the train as soon as it pulls into the station to grab a seat on the first minibuses heading up the mountain to the ruins. Missing the first buses could mean an hour's lost time at the station.

—Bring a box lunch if daytripping from Cuzco. Machu Picchu hotel food is mediocre and expensive, and a sitdown lunch can really cut into touring time.

—Try to plan a visit during the April-though-September dry season, and don't forget raingear if arriving during other months of the year.

Probation office set for Colwood

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The provincial probation service is establishing an office in Colwood for the first time in an effort to get a firmer control over a growing juvenile crime problem in the western communities.

Brian Malin, supervisor of juvenile probation in the Greater Victoria area, said in an interview Friday the office is scheduled to open Sept. 1 and will have an intial staff of three full-time and one part-time officers under the supervision of Al Jones.

The creation of the new office is welcomed by RCMP in Colwood who describe juvenile crime as their biggest problem.

Malin said the organization of the office will be left to Jones, a veteran probation officer, but it is expected two of the full-time and the part-time staff members will concentrate on juvenile and family problems with the other involved more in probation work for adults.

All of the staff is being transferred from other probation offices in the area, with two coming from the family court in Victoria and the third from the old James Bay community office. There are 31 probation officers in Greater Victoria.

Malin said the Colwood office will serve all of the western communities from View Royal to Port Renfrew and include a portion of the Malahat.

"It's an area we've really neglected over the years," he said. "It's been difficult to service because of the way our manpower was set up.

"Most of the stuff just got pushed under the carpet."

He said the probation service has long recognized it was doing a poor job there and two years ago assigned a probation officer, Dave Turner, to the assess the problems.

Turner, who left in June to take a job at the University of Victoria, soon uncovered a Pandora's Box of juvenile problems. By the time he left he had built up a caseload of between 50 and 60, double the regional average.

This spring an auxiliary probation officer, Dave Borgstrom, was hired on a temporary basis to help out. His appointment ends at the end of August.

Borgstrom, 32, said the current caseload represents only about half the number of kids in the western communities whom police have identified as troublemakers.

He said that judging from delinquency patterns there are major social and family problems in the widely-spread, largely rural western region.

While the establishment of a probation office and a close working relationship with police is an important step to begin tackling the problems, other measures will also have to be taken to provide long-term solutions, he felt.

They include a swifter, more exacting disposition of cases coming before the courts, greater attention to public education and more parental involvement, and the hiring of an Outreach worker to work more closely with troubled kids.

"We are sitting on top of a time bomb here," he said adding that if more attention isn't given to preventive programs, the situation can only get worse.

A touch of glamor

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian designer Wayne Clark, 30, obviously loves to see women looking glamorous, if not racy, if his fall evening collection is any indication.

At a recent showing to 700 Toronto women, Clark showed a strapless, ruffled black lace evening gown worn with skin-tight black sequinned pants.

Another show stopper was a collection of slim black crepe dresses with lace collars. Then there was a backless black sequinned jumpsuit with decolletage slit to the navel, topped by a black feather jacket; a black sequinned cocoon wrap over a feather-bodiced jumpsuit; strapless evening gowns that clung to the body and thigh-high slits in front or at the side.

Necks not stretched

WASHINGTON (AP) — The elegant long-necked women of Burma — whose heads rest atop a stack of brass rings — don't have their necks stretched at all, says a doctor who investigated the ancient beauty secret.

Dr. John Keshishian in an article in National Geographic Magazine says an examination of x-rays taken of these so-called giraffe women show that the long necks don't come from vertebrae or ligaments being stretched, as has been suspected.

"In effect, the chest had been pushed down."

Coils of brass are added periodically around a young woman's neck until they reach about 30 centimetres high and weigh about 20 pounds.

"Each added loop increases pressure downward on the vertebral column," says Keshishian. "Something had to give — and did."

The Washington chest surgeon says the women's collarbones and upper ribs are gradually pushed down, causing the neck to look elongated.

The women are members of the Padaung, a tribe of about 7,000 members living in an area of eastern Burma about 320 kilometres north of Rangoon.

Backyard best spot to retire?

MONTREAL (CP) — For years, retired Canadians have been heading south to warmer climes. But now, a U.S. pioneer in retirement planning is questioning this trend.

Peter Dickinson, author of several books on retirement and special investigator for the U.S. senate special committee on aging, is attempting to discover retirement possibilities outside the United States.

He was in Montreal recently to research Canada's retirement prospects for Americans for a new book to be entitled Retirement Edens.

Dickinson believes that Canada holds many advantages for the retired American — economic, political and social.

Not surprisingly, perhaps, he points out that Victoria offers beautiful scenery, a moderate climate and services for senior citizens.

His first book, Sunbelt Retirement, deals with retirement in the southern U.S. and examines about 500 locations in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, New Mexico and Texas.

Both his books aim at helping people research possibilities before deciding where they will spend their retirement years.

"Most of us are where we are," he says, "due to an accident of birth or because economic need keeps us there."

But he believes that people about to retire are still interested in exploring new frontiers and that many have "nursed a dream about where they want to live but have been unable to fulfil it because of other commitments."

He suggests starting out by taking a vacation in the area you think is the place for you.

Dickinson also recommends revisiting the location at another time of year to get an idea of what it would be like to live there year round.

The next step would be to rent housing for a minimum of six months. That housing would be similar to what you would obtain if you were staying on a permanent basis.

An alternative would be to arrange for a house swap with a local resident. This would provide the opportunity "to see how you respond to the community and how the community responds to you."

Only after following these steps, Dickinson says, can you be sure of being able to make a decision that is right for you.

Of the other major cities he visited, he found that Montreal could provide relatively low-cost housing within an urban setting.

Ottawa offers the greatest recreational and cultural possibilities coupled with moderate housing costs, Dickinson found.

Calgary is the most expensive, but it has great opportunities for retired people who want to get into something new.

In the Maritimes, Dickinson says, there are opportunities to retire in "less expensive communities unspoiled by commercialism," while the Yukon still provides opportunities for the "rugged individualist."

The same, he adds, is true of Newfoundland.

Jewelry insurance headache

TORONTO (CP) — Diamonds may be forever, but so are the payments you'll make to insure your wedding ring for its replacement value.

Increases in the price of gold and diamonds have turned modest rings bought for $300 five years ago into $1,000 treasures.

But with the magic of inflation has come annual headaches for jewelry owners, complications for insurance companies and a boom in business for jewelry appraisers.

It has been the policy of many insurance companies to ask customers with more than $1,000 worth of jewelry to have it appraised every three years.

Lately, however, companies have wondered how to encourage more frequent appraisals without driving away customers.

They want to stem a growing tide of disappointed customers who find themselves under-insured when they are victims of an increasing number of burglaries.

Last year in Toronto, more than 12,000 homes and apartments were broken into and robbed, up from about 10,300 the year before. The value of all losses during break-ins, including the losses of businesses, was $15.7 million.

R. J. McCormick, vice-president and general manager of Reliance Insurance Co., said nearly 50 per cent of recent claims to his company for lost or stolen jewelry have not covered the cost of replacement.

"It is a problem, and there is no easy answer to it," said Dawson Crawford of Commercial Union Assurance.

Most wedding rings owned by Canadians were bought when gold was $35 or $40 an ounce. Today it's worth about $300 (U.S.) an ounce.

And the common quarter-carat diamond that now sells for $1,000 to $1,200 could be bought for $250 five years ago, said jewelry appraiser Hugh Proctor.

The unpredictable increase in the price of gold and diamonds raises a problem for the insurance company that wants to collect adequate premiums and the jewelry owner who wants to protect himself against inflation.

Royal Insurance Group automatically increases the face value of a policy covering a diamond by 15 per cent if the owner does not have an appraisal each year.

But Crawford of Commercial Union foresees problems with this and similar policies. Customers who are given the impression they are protected against inflation may complain if they find later the increase was not enough.

They are also likely to complain at the cost of an annual appraisal, $12 to $30 for each piece of jewelry.

Whether for insurance reasons or out of curiosity, however, more people are having their valuables appraised.

Proctor, whose appraisal firm acts as a consultant to several insurance companies, said his and other companies have about doubled their business in the last year.

European chic in separates . . .

Among the smart new imports we saw in Eaton's Signature Shop this week . . . we're tempted to award top honors to those emanating from France and Germany . . . By Gerard Pasquier, of Paris, come impeccably tailored corduroy pants, in shades of camel, brown, burgundy and sage green . . . Likewise skirts . . . Brown or green shadow plaid tweeds with box pleats in front and a kick pleat in the back . . . Another straight skirt is vertically striped, with side pockets and slits both centre front and back . . . In solid color pure wool, there's a grey flannel skirt with front box pleats, and a burgundy worstead whose front pleat is buttoned down . . . Matching leather belt . . . The German group we looked at bear the Estrada label . . . There's a delightful little burgundy wool and mohair jacket whose shawl collar and pockets are trimmed with ultrasuede . . . This would look enormously chic teamed with the Estrada camel and burgundy plaid skirt slightly gathered into a wide-banded wrap . . . Or the skirt in a smaller check, with a double pleat right down the front . . . Both these skirts are 100% wool and are fully lined . . . You'll notice we've mentioned burgundy fairly often . . . It, along with the berry shades, is well up on the color spectrum for fall and winter . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, loc. 242.

When does a catnap become a sick sleep?

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

BZZ·ZZ
8-5
Buel

DEAR DR. MILLER: The older Ali gets, the sleepier he seems to be. He's 13 now and he spends about 16 hours a day sleeping. Could this possibly be normal for a cat? — A.V.

DEAR A.V.: Certainly. Some felines far younger than Ali spend two-thirds of every 24 hours cat-napping. Seemingly excessive slumber time should be a cause for concern if it's a distinct change, in particular a rather rapid change, in the cat's pattern.

Many sick animals, of course, simply become sluggish because of their illness, and consequently lie around resting and sleeping more than normal. Any comparatively sudden change in the sleeping pattern, then, is an indication for a checkup.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: What are bronchial washings in a dog and what are they for? — T.H.

DEAR T.H.: Bronchial washing is a diagnostic procedure using saline solution as a flushing agent. Debris from the bronchial tubes is flushed out and examined for everything from parasites to infectious agents to possibly malignant cells. A bronchial wash is usually used in an effort to help clarify a cloudy or confusing lung problem.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Would a female fox be more friendly if she were spayed? — D.D.

DEAR D.D.: Probably. Hormones are an important part of the defensive/aggressive posture maintained by the fox. Even with spaying, however, consider that, first, the fox is primarily a solitary (non-social) animal. Second, and more important, it is not a domestic species. It is not, therefore, a desirable pet, and further, a wild fox may be carrying rabies.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sidney is a big parrot. We can get him free, but he's sort of old. Besides, the man that owned him before had tuberculosis. Would this mean that Sidney could have tuberculosis, too, or do parrots get it? If they do, could he be tested for it? — R.A.

DEAR R.A.: Yes, Sidney could have picked up TB from his human owner. A tuberculine test for TB could be used on Sidney, though the test would not be, unfortunately, 100 per cent reliable.

Because of the uncertainties surrounding Sidney's condition, your own local veterinarian might advise agaist taking him on as a family member.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: This woman I met at work must really think I'm stupid. She bet me a dollar that they have drops now that you give by mouth for fleas that will kill them in just a few hours. There's no such thing, is there? I never heard of such a dumb way to kill fleas.

I can't believe they'd actually put something like that out. I only talk to this woman sometimes because we both have dogs. — D.N.

DEAR D.N.: Actually, oral drops (and tablets) for (against) fleas are available. You're right in one respect, though. It would be a big job to try it on each flea and persuade it to commit suicide by swallowing some of this poison.

However, it isn't done that way. Instead, it's given to the dog, or in the dog's food, and the fleas on that particular dog are killed indirectly.

Friar's

Common ¢ents

by Kate MacQueen

If you're adding wall insulation to your home, ask the contractor about the possibility of condensation on inside walls in the winter. The moisture could wet the insulation enough to make it ineffective and could also cause damage to paint inside and out. Ask how to prevent this trouble, too.

* * *

In one square foot of growing space, you can have one eggplant, cucumber, tomato or bush squash plant; or six lettuce plants bordered with radishes or scallions; or dozens of carrots. If you have plenty of daily sunshine on patio or sun deck, plant a few deep pots, buckets, barrels, baskets or wooden boxes and save on food costs. Fertilize often for a bountiful harvest.

Dear Abby

Some answers for parents who adopt

DEAR ABBY: I am the editor of a newsletter for adoptive parents.

Some years back you had a column about the typical stupid questions all parents of adopted children were asked. You offered some wonderful suggested replies. Could you please hunt up that item and run it again? I would like to run it in our newsletter with your permission. — ANN G.

DEAR ANN: I found the item, and here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: A prospective adoptive mother asked you for help in replying to 'dear, kindly, well-meaning' friends and relatives who ask personal questions about the adoption.

May I help? I have been through it four times and have heard all comments and questions. Here are some tried and true responses:

Q: Oh, isn't it a shame you can't have 'children of your own'?

A: Not really; there's a lot of insanity in both our families.

Q: Do you know all about the parents?

A: Everything. One was male. The other was female.

Q: Did the adoption agency try to match your features, coloring and personalities?

A: Good grief, I hope not!

Q: Aren't you worried about hereditary factors?

A: Heavens, no. Regardless of how bad their ancestors were, they've got to better than ours!

Best wishes! — BEEN THERE.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: The night before Mother's Day our son called and invited us out for a Mother's Day dinner along with his wife, her brother and his wife, and his wife's mother. Now here's the clinker: "Would we pay our own way since he was broke?"

My wife turned down the invitation, so our son said he'd stop by the house in the morning to wish her a happy Mother's Day.

Abby, this same son went to Nassau last month for a vacation with his wife and his wife's sister and brother. Last summer they had a lovely vacation in Europe, and plan to go again this summer. (They're taking her folks along.)

I am fed up with this whole outfit. It is plain to me that we are not accepted by our son's wife and her people. How can I make my wife see the light? I hate to hurt her feelings. Sign me . . .
— DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: Your wife must see the light as clearly as you. There's no point in rubbing it in. Why discuss the obvious?

Getting away from it all? No, we're taking it with us

TORONTO (CP) — There was a time when Canadians would go to the woods or weekend in the countryside to get away from it all. But increasingly, in the process of leaving it all behind, they are taking a lot of it with them.

Millions of dollars are being spent on ways and means of getting outside cities, but more and more of city living is being taken along.

The Allied Boating Association of Canada reports that one Canadian family in six owns a boat, and despite a slumping economy and rising fuel prices 80,000 pleasure craft were bought in 1978.

Sales of recreational vehicles, from little tent trailers to lumbering, gas-thirsty motor homes, reached $300 million last year.

In cottage country, the newest trend is condominium townhouses.

Even campers have their take-a-long luxuries. There's the $15 portable plastic sink, with water supply attached, the electronic bug killers and $126 battery-powered fish finders.

Professor Clayne Jensen, dean of health at Brigham Young University in Utah, says Europeans are more prepared to rough it than are North Americans.

They take fewer gadgets with them and run less risk of "becoming slaves of their possessions."

The last word in home-away-from-home life is the Bluebird Wanderlodge motor home, a product of the Bluebird Body Co. in Georgia.

Selling for $165,000 to $200,000 a Wanderlodge comes with a closed-circuit television instead of a rear-vision mirror and a second television camera to show the driver what's happening in the rear of the bus. Although it's outfitted like a luxury apartment, the wall safes and ice-makers are optional.

The top line of Winnebago Industries' motor homes comes with a central vacuum system, microwave and conventional ovens and color television — all for $86,000.

But despite the boom in recreational comforts, many Canadians are disdaining the soft touch. More are genuinely roughing it, slogging backpacks through the woods, canoeing through lonely lakes and setting up tents in the wilderness.

"The number of those people is growing even more quickly than the comfort campers," says Ron Kaighin, publisher of Outdoor Canada magazine.

"They leave the city for silence and adventure and the thrill of knowing they have to depend completely on themselves."

Oh, the Betsy Ross of Texas . . .

KNIT AND CHAT

with May E. Mac Lean

Most of us have heard of Betsy Ross. On my recent trip to Georgia, I came across the story of how another woman took her place in history through her needle and thread.

Her name was Joanna Troutman and some call her the Betsy Ross of Texas. She lived all her life in Georgia, but was a true daughter of Texas. She's buried in the State Cemetery in Austin, and hers is the only statue of a woman there, for this young Georgia girl designed the first Lone Star Flag.

The year of the flag was 1835 and the 18-year-old Joanna had attended a town meeting called to discuss Stephen F. Austin's plea for Georgia volunteers to aid the Texans in their fight for freedom from Mexico.

It was nightfall when the meeting was over and Joanna returned home. According to legend, she noticed "a single early evening star twinkling bravely in a cloud-logged sky."

Next morning Joanna began to sew the flag made from a silk skirt. On either side she appliqued a five-pointed star of blue silk.

The flag was presented to Col. William Ward, who answered Austin's plea and took his Georgia battalion to Texas that year. When Col. Ward joined Col. James Fannin at Goliad, he took the flag with him. On March 2, when troops at Goliad learned of the declaration of freedom from Mexico, the Lone Star Flag flew for the first time over the Republic of Texas.

The men at Goliad didn't survive a Mexican attack that came later that month. But for the remainder of the Texas struggle for independence, the Lone Star Flag was the banner for soldiers whose battle cry was "Remember the Alamo! Remember Goliad!"

Years after her death, Joanna's body was moved from Georgia and re-interred in the State Cemetry in Austin. A few feet away from her grave is her statue, with a needle and thread in one hand and the flag in the other.

Rats kick booze

MONTREAL (CP) — A group of Concordia University researchers has found a drug to make rats kick the drinking habit.

The researchers intend to test the drug on humans early next next year, hopeful that it will cure alcoholism effortlessly and even allow rehabilitated alcoholics to become social drinkers.

The drug — called FLA-57 — interferes with the chemical reaction liquor triggers in the brain and eliminates the "high" or feeling of euphoria a drinker normally enjoys, Amit says.

A pinhole camera is a small can or box with a black interior and a tiny hole in the middle of one end.

The best thing about a pinhole camera is that you can make one yourself — one that will produce pictures inexpensively. The pictures that come out well should provide you with a special thrill, as you'll know that they have been exclusively your own creation from beginning to end.

How to Make and Use a Pinhole Camera is a free booklet which explains how to make two different types of pinhole cameras. Many of the materials that you'll need can be found around the house. Once you've gathered all the materials together, it's just a matter of following the step-by-step assembling instructions the booklet furnishes.

Since 1967, there has been a sharp decrease in the silver content of dimes and quarters. This has prompted many coin collectors to keep a sharp lookout for 10- and 25-five cent pieces that date prior to 1967.

Even people who don't normally collect coins have gotten into the act by purchasing silver money at higher than list prices. Owing to this rush on pre-1967 coins, spotting a silver dime or quarter has become an increasingly rare sight.

Flagstone woes? Here's what to do

By A. J. HAND

One of the most common materials for paving walks and patios is flagstone, laid on a sand bed. It produces a beautiful rustic surface that usually stands up to the elements for years without trouble.

But every now and then, troubles can crop up. Years of freeze-thaw cycles can throw stones out of level. An occasional stone may break. The sand between stones may wash away and weeds can take its place. But fixing all these problems is fairly simple.

A particularly wet spring with temperatures that continually cross the freezing point will produce frost heaves that can tear up highways. So it's no surprise that the same conditions can throw flags out of level.

Don't rush your repairs. Give your paving a few weeks to stabilize after the spring thaw is over. Then go to work.

Examine the stones. Usually unevenness results when some stones are raised above the level of others. But occasionally a few stones will sink. Evaluate your situation, then raise any low stones, and lower any that are too high. To raise a stone, lift it out of place and spread a layer of sand under it. Even better than sand is stone dust. It packs down better and becomes almost as firm as concrete with time.

Use enough sand or stone dust to raise the low stone to the level of those around it. Try to spread the sand evenly, or slightly higher around the edges than at the centre. If the bed of sand is high near the centre, the stone will rock on the high spot.

Dampen the sand with a fine mist from the garden hose, then replace the flagstone and check it for fit. If necessary add or subtract sand. Then put sand or stone dust into the joints around the stone, dampen it and pack it into place with a piece of wood. Keep packing until the joints won't take any more.

Resetting a high stone requires the same procedure except that you remove the excess bedding instead of adding it. After leveling the stone be sure to pack the joints. These help provide a firm bed and keep the stone from shifting.

Broken stones are best replaced. Take a piece of the broken stone with you to your stone supplier (garden centres, home centres, lumberyard, mason supply houses all have flagstone) and try to get a piece that matches. The replacement should be at least 1½ inches thick for use on a sand bed. Thinner flags tend to break unless laid on mortar.

You may have to cut the replacement stone to fit its spot. The easiest way to do this is with an abrasive cutoff wheel in a portable circular saw. Any decent tool outlet will have these wheels in stock.

If you don't have a saw, you can rent one — a good idea if you have a lot of cutting to do — or you can do the job with a hammer and chisel. The chisel approach is slow and takes a bit of skill. Here's how it goes:

Use a mason's chisel and a two-pound hammer to score both sides of the stone along the desired line of cut. Sometimes you can get by scoring only one side of the stone, but if you score both sides you will be more likely to break the stone where you want to. Work on a level bed of sand while scoring.

Once you have a score line about ⅛ inch deep on both sides of the stone, the flag should break along the line. Place the stone on a piece of wood with the scrap part of the stone hanging over the edge. Then tap the scrap until it drops off.

Once all your stones are back to level, spread some sand or stone dust over the surface of the paving and sweep it into the joints. Dampen it slightly and pack it into place. A good tight pack will help discourage weeds. You can use a herbicide if weeds are a real problem, but chemicals aren't a good idea if your paving is near a well or vegetable garden.

More deaf rights

TORONTO (CP) — The rights of the deaf have advanced further in the last 15 years than any other time in history, says the president of a society for the deaf.

However, Frank Sullivan of the National Fraternal Society of the Deaf, says the deaf still are trying to stress that deafness is not the handicap that many assume it is.

Sullivan said the society has disproved to insurance companies that the deaf are accident prone, that they do not live as long as other people and that there are more suicides because of the frustrations of being deaf.

YOUR HEALTH

Hard to guard against keloids

Years ago, my appendix was taken out. The scar is not a pleasant one to look at. The doctor said it was a keloid. Now, I'm contemplating having a face lift. Is there any possibility that the scars will heal as poorly as my appendix scar? — Mrs. H.C.

DEAR MRS. C.:

A keloid is a firm, dense thickening of the skin that follows surgery, a wound or a laceration. Normally, skin wounds heal with a fine line which is sometimes barely visible. In some instances, instead of the normal white line of healing, marked thickening and elevation of the scar occur. This tendency is especially prevalent among black people, but also is frequently seem among whites. There is no well-established reason for this aberration in skin healing.

The fact that you have developed a keloid in the appendectomy scar should make you wary of the possibility that a similar elevated scar may occur following plastic surgery or any other type of skin incision.

Some surgeons believe that the use of cortisone by injection into the scar area may reduce the possibility of keloid formation. In some instances, small amounts of x-ray treatment are given to prevent keloid formation after surgery. None of these can be depended on to be entirely effective.

Before becoming involved with plastic surgery, you must discuss every aspect of this keloid problem with your surgeons. Unless you do so, the excellent results of the cosmetic surgery may be followed by disappointment and anguish.

What's the best way to prevent athlete's foot? I'm 14 years old. — Gordon B.

DEAR GORDON:

Athlete's foot is caused by a fungus which is a tiny organism that can be seen under a microscope. The fungus grows very actively on skin that is moist and warm. Consequently, the best way to prevent athlete's foot is with excellent foot hygiene.

It is most important that you dry your feet carefully after bathing or swimming. Most people are very careless about this.

Since fungus infections are readily passed from one person to another, care must be taken in the gym or in public places. Wearing slippers is one of the best preventatives.

In warm weather, thick socks made of wool, orlon, nylon or dacron can induce excess sweating. The moisture can encourage the growth of the fungus. As soon as you finish your sports activity, shower immediately and carefully wash and dry your feet. A simple dusting powder can be used.

It's a lot easier to prevent athlete's foot than to treat it

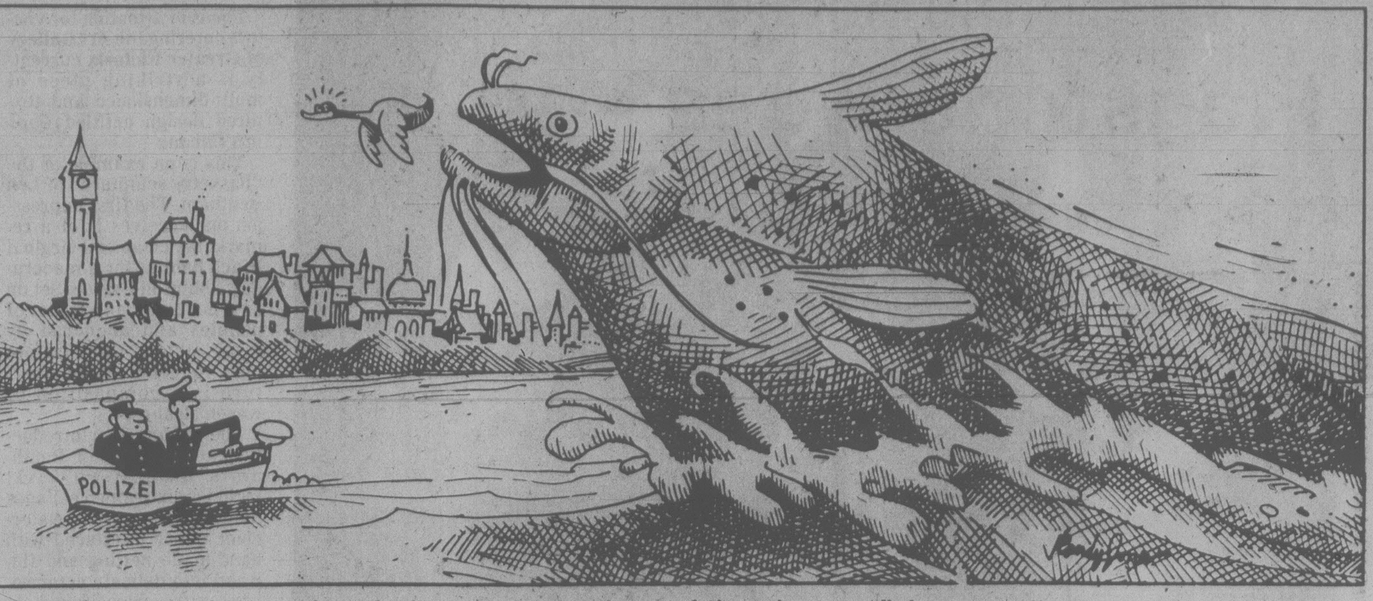
Dachshund-gobbling fish has locals hooked



Even the ducks aren't safe from the attentions of the giant catfish, according to local residents

By JOHN VINOCUR
New York Times

BAD ZWISCHENAHN, West Germany — The catfish that may eat Germany lives here.

He weighs either 220 or 390 pounds, is either 11 or 14 feet long, has gray or brown or greenish fins, eats a third or half of his weight per day in fish, birds, ducks or dachshunds, lives deep in the bottom mud or just under the water's surface and will soon celebrate his 35th, 40th or 80th birthday here, growing lonesome in this very orderly little place where a lot of people don't believe in him at all.

Bad Zwischenahn and Lake Zwischenahn, about an hour's drive west of Bremen in north Germany, are not the kind of places where the folks hang easy with a good story about a big fish. It is a land of literalness, a lake without cattails or hoot owls or spooky mists that can turn an old log into a crocodile at twilight. The lawns here run to the water's edge as clipped and uniform as Astroturf; the boats at the marina are arranged in size places and covered with identical orange protective tarpaulins, like cars waiting for shipment at some vast railroad siding, and a policeman sits in a glass-enclosed watchman's post surveying behavior on the lake that loops, gray-blue, in a one-and-a-half-mile long, mile-wide curve before him.

The problem at Bad Zwischenahn, population 20,700, the thing that makes the people at Kache's fruit market or Zorba's restaruant or Egon Oeltjen's eel smokehouse feel a little uneasy is that the man who saw the catfish is Police Sgt. Peter Grunke, usually a symbol of rationality and the normal, immutable order of things.

Not only did he see the catfish, but he also entered the sighting into his logbook under besondere Vorkommnisee ("special happenings") with sufficient constabulary detail and the use of the word "alleged" to get the newspapers interested. In no time, the catfish's size, weight and habits grew, much like Vietnam War body counts or intelligence estimates of Soviet troop strength in Eastern Europe, depending on whose story you were reading.

Bild am Sonntag, the country's largest Sunday newspaper, then set up a catch-the-catfish contest with a prize of more than $2,500 to the winner and a spot for the catfish in the Duisburg Zoo.

Although Mayor Dietrich Osmers, a man with a voice like a bramble patch, said immediately that the "beast must be shot or harpooned at once," other townspeople found the story not only hard to believe when it surfaced last month but also a lot less than amusing.

"Drivel," said a woman who has a souvenir stand about 100 yards from Sergeant Grunke's glassed-in surveillance station. "All I know is that butter is butter, and when I have five marks in my hand that's five marks. Don't bother me with monster catfish."

Peter Kache, commodore at the local yacht club, said:, "I like Grunke and think he's a reasonable man, but this catfish business is for some less reasonable place, let's say Mexico, than Bad Zwischenahn. Why would it come here?"

Grunke takes all the doubt with reasonable good humor. He is 41 years old and in his blue serge uniform with four gold stripes on the sleeve and a white cap, he looks like a man ready for important naval assignments. It is only when he talks, when his smile soars and his story races forward, that he seems like someone whose horizon goes beyond the far shore of the lake. Describing his experience, he said:

"We were out on our boat, Officer Gerd Dirks and myself, that's Patrol Boat W30, making tests on our radio about 10:25 a.m. when we saw it. We saw the rear section moving in the clear water about 15 yards from us. The fish was about a yard shorter than our boat, which is more than 14 feet long. I was shocked. I really didn't know what to do. So I headed the boat toward the fish and it dove under. I just couldn't believe it, and if there weren't another witness, I never would have said a thing. But I wrote up my report and that's where things started."

It was then, the sergeant said, that people began saying he might have had a beer too many. This didn't bother him so much, he said, as the idea that too may of his friends in Bad Zwischenahn were not ready to accept that a giant catfish could exist. He was an East Prussian, the sergeant said, a refugee from a part of Poland where they knew about giant catfish, eerie lakes and tales well told. "Here in north Germany," he went on, "it's see it, touch it, have it. A lot of people don't want to believe in anything. So they don't know about a lot of things."

A local dentist, Grunke said, had seen the catfish elsewhere in the lake and told him about it but didn't feel like discussing it in public.

"So there's only Dirks and me," the sergeant said. "And we saw it."

In fact, catfish weighing more than 400 pounds have been found in Europe, but to modern Germans on two-week vacations around Lake Zwischenahn, the very idea of swimming into such a monster seems absurd.

In a country that sometimes seems to cry out for more eccentricity, its own slice of fantasy, the story was a rare one.

THE TOTAL CHAMPION
BY Sir Harry Golombek

What are the duties of a world chess champion and what are his obligations? What his rights and privileges are seem to me to be fairly obvious. He is entitled to our respect and admiration. And more practically, he receives more honor and bigger financial rewards than those below him in the hierarchy. He will be given bigger fees for simultaneous displays and to appear in other events. His books sell better than those of lesser mortals. And he may even be paid just to turn up at some event without actually having to participate.

No one grudges a world champion such privileges for he has walked through fire for them.

In return, two main obligations are expected of him. First, he must remain active. To gain the title and then stop participating in chess events can be regarded only as a dereliction of duty. In this respect, Anatoly Karpov's immediate predecessor, the redoubtable Bobby Fischer, was a disaster. Tragically, he failed to play a game after he won the title.

But the world champion has another obligation which is just as important. He must play like a world champion: That is to say, he must play in a noble and admirable style so that the rest of us can enjoy the artistic creations of the world's leading player and so that the young and aspiring players of the world can have a fair example of how a champion exercises his art.

How has the present holder of the world title fulfilled these criteria? In the first requirement, he has more than fulfilled his duties. He may have been the most active world champion of all time. However, as regards the second requirement, I am not so sure or so happy.

In the last few years, there seems to have entered into Karpov's make-up as a player a sort of plodding realism that has brought results but at the expense of championship style. but, tactically, he is still superb, as shown by the following game played in the grandmaster tournament at Montreal earlier this year.

(c) Threatening to bring the Rook into decisive action.

(d) Karpov has suggested 15. P-B5 but Black would still have a fine game after 15 . . . BxBP.

(e) In reply to 32. Q-N2, or B—B3, Black wins by R-R4ch.

The solution to the problem above is: 1. K-B3, P-N5ch; 2. K-B4 mate; or 1. K-B3, NxP; 2.K-Q2 mate; or 1. K-B3, K-K4; 2. N-Q7 mate, etc.

U.S. waives sea 'rules'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House has directed the Navy and Air Force to assert the right of free passage through disputed waters and airspace of nations claiming more than a three-mile territorial sea limit, Pentagon officials said today.

The directive from the White House was transmitted last month to the State and Defense departments, and communicated to the two services through the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Only 22 nations, among them the United States, claim a three-mile territorial sea.

Seventy-six nations claim a 12-mile territorial limit and some nations claim up to 200 miles.

The Law of the Seas conference has failed to resolve these differences and settle on a universal distance for a coastal nations' territorial sea.

Until such a resolution is reached, the United States does not recognize more than a three-mile limit.

The United States holds that water and sea beyond the three-mile limit constitutes the high seas through which the vessels of all nations, traditionally, may freely travel.

Officials said in the recent past there have been occasions when naval ships or aircraft avoided taking the short distance between two points because such a course would pass through territory claimed by a coastal state.

Crews of U.S. fishing boats have been arrested by Peru which claims a 200-mile territorial sea, and incidents have occurred off the coast of Libya.

Detente drink: vodka laced on torpedo

AGANA, Guam (UPI) — A Soviet spy trawler that retrieved a practice torpedo fired from a U.S. nuclear submarine returned the projectile today with a concilatory bottle of vodka attached, ending a tense confrontation in the Pacific.

The drama, which involved high-level contacts between Washington and Moscow, began Friday when the Guam-based submarine, which the Navy refused to identify, fired the unarmed Mark-37 torpedo during a training exercise near the U.S. trust territory, the Navy said.

The Russian trawler, believed shadowing the submarine, recovered the projectile near the target area in the Pacific, which the Navy wouldn't pinpoint.

Slick drought feared

URBANA, Ill. (UPI) — The oil slick spreading over the Gulf of Mexico could cause a serious drought in the Midwest next year if it is not contained, a University of Illinois water expert said Friday.

A major drought in the Midwest would seriously disrupt the world's food supply, since much of the total corn and soybean crop is raised in the region.

The slick is spreading from the Ixtoc I rig in Mexico's Bay of Campeche. It is the worst oil spill in history and oil from the blown well already has reached Texas beaches.

Wyndham J. Roberts, engineer emeritus at the Illinois State Water Survey, said if the runaway oil was not contained, it could cover half the Gulf within a year.

"The Gulf is the main source of moisture for the midwestern and eastern United States," he said. Wind carries water which evaporates in the Gulf to the north, where it falls as rain and snow.

"If this source of moisture is cut off, it could create a continuous drought," he said.

Executives jailed

STOCKHOM (Reuter) — Two bank executives were sentenced to four years in jail Friday for attempting to defraud their bank of $3 million, Stockholm district court officials said. The two, were convicted of diverting the money into their own Swiss bank accounts between 1973 and 1978 while the Stockhom Sparbanken for which they worked thought it was going to foreign loans.

Georgians fare well in shakeup

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The White House, in a long-promised staff shakeup that leaves President Carter's inner circle of Georgians virtually intact, Friday announced that presidential counsel Robert Lipshutz is resigning.

The move, which had been widely billed as the second half of Carter's sweeping reorganization of his administration, was relatively minor.

Although Lipshutz is from Georgia, he has never been considered a member of the inner circle.

Other changes included the resignation of Tim Kraft, assistant to the president, to become director of the Carter-Mondale re-election campaign committee.

Kate Phillips and Rod Hunt in Fables, Fools and Fantasy at Phoenix Theatre

'Fables, Fools and Fantasy'

A student production currently at the Phoenix Theatre on University of Victoria campus is bulging with theatrical and musical talent. It is a story theatre production entitled Fables, Fools and Fantasy, directed by Jim Leard of UVic's theatre department and with music by composer David Boyce.

Cast and crew are members of the seventh annual Senior Secondary Summer Theatre Workshop conducted by the theatre department. The presentation is a culmination of six weeks of training in acting, movement, voice, lighting and set construction.

Eight Victoria students are participating among a total registration of 35 from across the province. Janet Cook and Mike O'Brian will be attending Victoria High School this fall. Mike was named "Best Junior High Actor" in the High School Drama Festival last spring.

Brodie Davidson is a student from Oak Bay Secondary who last appeared in Anne of Green Gables. Davina Stewart is from St.Margaret's School. She last played the lead in Alice in Wonderland, and both the latter plan to pursue theatre careers. Rodney Hunt, Elizabeth Huggins and Stephanie French are all from Spectrum Community School.

Fables, Fools and Fantasy will be seen at the Phoenix through Aug. 16, except Sunday. Based on stories by the brothers Grimm, it has been adapted by Leard and retains the original narrative form but the tales are enriched with all the theatrical devices of action, sound, light and music. The students are showing highly promising form in acting, playing instruments, and making effective use of masks and costumes.

'Basketry sculpture' at Gallery

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Focus of attention for visitors entering the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria currently is a striking piece of multi-dimensioned and textured design entitled Copious Cabana.

This is an example of the "basketry sculpture" of Len Bentham. The first impression one receives is of a remarkably clean and virginal beach habitat for a modern-day Robinson Crusoe. Set up on a neatly arranged mat of pebbles and anchored by large stones, this six-foot high, 10-foot diameter structure is a composition of woven sisal rope.

The Cabana is an introduction to a display of Bentham's unique work. It includes six framed collages made of woven white watercolor paper interlaced with hand-made netting and finished into delicate compositions with various found objects. A series of small wire sculptures is displayed under the title Reliquary Objects. The first of these began as a basket but grew into a sculpture unrelated to basketry.

In addition there are two baskets made of ticker-tape. The lacy appearance of the tape with the complexity of the plaiting results in delicate yet substantial looking pieces. Still another basket is formed from braided bamboo leaves coiled with fleece.

The eight-column White Group was plaited from Polynesian matting which was first unwoven from its original use, then re-woven into the tall sculptures. Rice paper, white paint and a profusion of red threads and yarns were then attached.

Trained initially at the Vancouver School of Art, Bentham, 31, discovered his principal satisfaction was in working with three-dimensional materials. A book on contemporary basketry aroused his interest in the sculptural possibility of basket weaving. Since that time he has acquired the techniques of coiling, weaving, plaiting and twining. All manner of materials have been used in his work — fur, leather, plastic, surveyor's tape, feathers, copper sheeting and coconut shells were either used or stored for some future occasion.

At the suggestion of the Victoria Art Gallery's assistant director, Robert Amos, Bentham applied for and received an Explorations Grant from Canada Council in 1978. This allowed him six months to pursue the making of basketry as a contemporary art form. He made three large environmental sculptures, a series of tall standing "columns", six wall pieces and an array of baskets.

Much of this time was spent sitting next to an old-fashioned bathtub because reeds for weaving have to be kept wet at all times.

In working on Copious Cabana a mask had to be worn as a protection from hazardous sisal dust.

Bentham is more interested in the sculptural aspects of basketry than its function or utility. He finds a piece will change from its original concept as he works it. "I've had some disasters working this way," he says, "but I've created many more that were successful, evolving designs I could not have possibly dreamed up beforehand."

This display will be seen through Sept.1.

Cromwell's skull for sale

LONDON (Reuter) — A skull said to be that of Oliver Cromwell, who toppled the monarchy in the 17th century and ruled as a dictator, is for sale. Auctioneers in the town of Grantham said clients produced the skull, asking that it be sold together with documents to show it had been passed down from generation to generation. Cromwell was killed in 1658 and his head was last seen on a pole in London three years later.

Langham Court

A series of scenes from Shakespeare's plays under the title, A Lover and His Lass, is being presented at Victoria Theatre Guild's Langham Court Theatre nightly until Aug. 18. On the same program David Campton's The Cagebirds is being performed under the direction of Denis Johnston.

The Shakespearean scenes are the concept of Barbara and Michael Meiklejohn in collaboration with Johnston. A Lover and His Lass is made up of scenes depicting various aspects of courtship, from the naivete of Romeo and Juliet to the political intrigues of Henry V.

The Cagebirds concerns six docile creatures content with the safety and familiarity of their cage and completely dominated by their mistress. When she introduces a new bird, a Wild One who rebels against imprisonment and the complacency of the others, the peace and safety of the cage is threatened and the cagebirds react with surprising violence.

Burt's back in business

Today's Music

By Leonard Feather

Los Angeles Times

Burt Bacharach.

The very name is a synonym for pop music success in the 1960s.

As hit followed hit through the decade, he became the man who had everything. Two Oscars, three Grammy awards, an unending succession of hit songs, with lyrics by Hal David, recorded most often by Dionne Warwick, produced by the Bacharach-David team. No fewer than 39 of them were on the charts during a ten-year span. As if that were not enough, and assuming that what the world needs now is love, add the gorgeous Angie Dickinson as Mrs. Bacharach.

Then, not all at once, but gradually over a few years, it all fell apart. The partnership with Warwick ended; she sued Bacharach and David. He wrote the score for a movie, Lost Horizon, the movie bombed, in a big way. The Bacharach-David partnership ended. So did the Bacharach-Bacharach team as he and Angie split. His name faded out of the charts.

It all sounds like material for a movie for which Burt might some day write the score. What matters now, however, is that Bacharach has picked himself up, ended his dry spell, and now is as busy and future-directed as he has been since the glory days.

Burt Bacharach, whom most women still find devastatingly good looking, sits back and reviews the traumatic events of his recent years, speaking with particular enthusiasm about his latest album, "Woman" (A £ M SP 3709). Though there are three vocal cuts, with lyrics by the respective singers (Carly Simon, Sally Stevens and Libby Titus), essentially this is an orchestral set with Burt conducting the Houston Symphony. The result is a deftly conceived and superbly executed illustration of his undimmed gifts as a classically trained composer.

"I'm especially proud that we cut the entire album live, in one four-hour session, at Jones Hall in Houston. I don't think there's anything else out there at the moment that's quite like this. We've cut down one piece, 'New York Lady,' for release as a single.

"I know it doesn't follow the rules for making a hit record today, but then, I've always been a rule-breaker, and things have worked out better when I've refused to take the advice of people who insisted that what I was doing just wouldn't work commercially. So we'll see. I know I'm gonna lose the people who are looking for 'Close to You' or 'Raindrops Keep Falling,' but I don't believe in going back into the past."

The idea for the album was born a year earlier when he conducted the symphony in a mixture of old and new material. "We've been living in a plastic world, where the strings come in three weeks later and wear headphones to hear what's been recorded; the brass and woodwinds do the same thing four weeks after the rhythm tracks were made, and they're not even playing in tune. What's wrong with having everybody playing at once, interacting, responding to one another? It was an exciting, Russian-roulette premise. In four hours, what happens if a cable blows? Well, we took that chance, and it worked."

The Houston project is one of several new ventures for Bacharach that have made this a year not of promises, promises, but of results, results. He has several new song-writing partners. One is Michael McDonald, lead singer with the Doobie Brothers. Through McDonald, he was recently reunited with Dusty Springfield, raising speculation that the man who provided her with "Look of Love" among other hits may work on producing a new album with her.

He has been writing with Paul Anka, under conditions he finds unusually stimulating to the creative juices. This summer, for the first time in years, he decided not to go out on tour, with Anthony Newley or anyone else; nor would he hang around Del Mar watching his horses (asked how many he owns, Burt replied: "Too many"); nor would he fall into the easy Palm Springs life of tennis and lying in the sun to which he has succumbed in the past.

Instead, he rented a house in Jackson Hole, Wyoming, where he has been working in solitude except for the times when Paul Anka has flown there in his jet.

"Paul usually writes both lyrics and music, but he has shown tremendous energy and enthusiasm for working with me. We finished nine songs in three days, and several of them, I think, are terrific.

"It's been great in Jackson Hole. No jockeys come knocking at my door. I work 11, 12 hours a day. With my isolation comes a certain loneliness, a self-enforced ritual of not getting close to the people in the community, of eating dinner alone every night. I'm getting discipline back into my bloodstream."

Along with the song-writing ventures, he has a new film chore lined up. "After Lost Horizon I just stopped writing for a year; when you invest so much energy and the film is a disaster, it's discouraging even when you get a hit recording out of it." ("Living Together, Growing Together," a big single for the Fifth Dimension, was from the score.)

The new film, tentatively titled "I Love You, I Love You Not," was shot in Italy with Maximilian Schell and Jacqueline Bisset. Bacharach calls it "A very good music-usage picture, because there are several nice places where there's no dialogue. Along with the instrumental score I'll have three or four songs."

BACHARACH
. . . holed up in Wyoming

Still another idea on the drawing board is a possible musical with Tony Newley. "It's been in the works for a year. The show is based on the life of Charlie Chaplin, with Newley playing Charlie; but we've been having book troubles, so it's in limbo at the moment."

For all his concern about film and show projects, and the new semi-classical album, Bacharach's songwriting image is not one he would want to lose. "It enables me to perform for good money in Las Vegas and Lake Tahoe. The bad side is that you become locked into that kind of thing. You get tired of playing the same old songs, but I find that if you toss in a new thing, even an instrumental, once in a while, they'll tolerate it."

Whenever either Bacharach or Dionne Warwick appears onstage, a heavy ratio of the material has to consist of Bacharach-David songs that were gold mines for them both; yet the coolness that grew out of the litigation appears to have become a permanent estrangement.

"The lawsuit has just been settled," Bacharach says. "That happened a few weeks ago, and it's a terrific weight off my shoulders. Her claim against us was something I really never understood. What I felt was not so much anger as hurt. You don't turn around and sue your friends.

"She was suing Hal and me about an album we supposedly failed to produce, and I pushed harder for the settlement. I must say I took the heavy initiative, and it cost me more than it cost Mr. David."

His mood now is one of guarded optimism, despite the precarious current state of the recording industry. He feels that the disaster is not only economic but artistic:

"The disco thing has destroyed so many records artistically and undercut so many singers and musicians. How many stations have gone disco? Seventy per cent? Stop to think about some of the great black artists, the Gladys Knights, the Motown people, that were really tremendous, and they're not where they used to be in terms of records, but they were caught in this bind.

"It carries all the way across to the great MOR (middle of the road) people. I never thought I'd see the day when Tony Bennett wasn't recording. But these things do go in cycles, and I try to take a positive view."

Fewer whites quit Rhodesia

SALISBURY (Reuter) — White emigration from Zimbabwe Rhodesia fell in June, the month a black-led government took office, official statistics show.

During June there was a net outflow of 821 whites, compared with 1,008 in May. Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa wants to keep as many whites in the country as possible.

Pianos and parochialism

Audrey Johnson

One would have to have a tin ear not to be enchanted by the gorgeous tones emitted by the Baldwin concert grand piano residing at the McPherson Playhouse this summer. For my part, there would be a sensuous pleasure to be gained from merely listening to scales being practised on such an instrument.

The prospect of its possible purchase for the Playhouse fills me with delight. One could be less thrilled if the piano was likely to come under careless or ignorant supervision. But the present McPherson staff is informed, knowledgeable and caring. Concern has been expressed by some people about the limited off-stage space for parking the nine-foot instrument. The answer to that is that of course the piano will spend its non-concert time below the stage level, suitably cloaked and in a well-aired, dry and temperature-controlled area.

How does it get there? Via the orchestra pit's hydraulic lift. I actually watched it being wafted gently and slowly down from the stage the other night and a smoother operation I have yet to see. Much less disturbing to a piano's sensitive nerves and sinews than constantly being shoved and pulled on and off stage.

After the generous discounts on the purchase price offered by the company and its Vancouver agency, and the magnificent offer by an anonymous donor of half the balance — $11,000 — it's a bit disturbing that there hasn't been a quicker response to executive director John Dyck's plea for more donors.

I find it hard to believe that there are not several hundred musically aware citizens out there willing and able to donate a few tax-free dollars to the purchase. In fact it would only take 50 to 100 citizens giving between $100 and $200 each to cinch it. Some of us have already made the gesture, but so far nowhere near enough.

The point is that the time for acting on the offer is short. In two weeks the piano will go back to Vancouver unless we can confirm our purchase. And its like may not come again for years — perhaps never.

The point is that pianos do not come off the factory assembly line as alike as peas in a pod. Everyone knows that automobiles do not and anyone who has read Arthur Hailey's Wheels knows why — human error and carelessness.

With pianos the situation is similar, only more so. The ratio of human input to machine input with pianos is much higher than with automobiles. Another factor with musical instruments concerns the materials involved.

Microscopic differences in wood grains and densities, in copper and steel wire and varnish, coupled with the fact that many of the processes in manufacturing a piano still can only be carried out by a craftsman's hands, means there are always subtle and often noticeable differences, not only between makes but within makes.

I learned that at the age of 15 when my teacher, a fine pianist, spent hours trying out numerous studio grands before selecting the one instrument he felt was good enough for my parents to buy for me.

At least one person has demanded to know why all the fuss about the Baldwin at McPherson ... "when everyone knows the Steinway is the best piano in the world!"

Sorry chum, it ain't necessarily so. The house of Steinway won't tell you that, of course, although it was the head of the New York house of Steinway himself who revealed to me that modern technocracy had made few changes in piano building and that human craftsmanship still prevails. Artists around the world will debate the qualities of various pianos, some preferring the Bechstein or other European make to such a degree that they even travel with one.

The Hamburg Steinway is considered by many to be superior to the New York Steinway. And then there are definitely artists who prefer the Baldwin.

But there is no getting away from the fact that this particular Baldwin is a gem, an aristocrat. All the internationally noted piano artists involved this summer with the Shawnigan School of the Arts and the Victoria International Festival (even those who are Steinway artists) are ecstatic about the instrument. And Victoria's own outstanding pianist, Robin Wood, spent some time trying out and examining the piano and declared it to be in his opinion superior to any other in Victoria area concert halls.

Considering the number of fine artist concerts that take place in the McPherson now, year-round, and considering that Victorians like to think of their city as being a cultivated — and especially a musical — city, there should be no question but that the Baldwin stays here.

Tantalizingly, the financial resources for its purchase exist in the area for a certainty. The danger is that they will not become available until too late. What is by no means a certainty is that a similar discount offer on the $30,000 tag will be made by the Baldwin people at a future time.

Positive indication is essential by Aug. 25 that the money will be forthcoming. Let's hope Victoria acts.

* * *

Some distressing indications of parochialism have surfaced this summer among people who normally are ardent supporters of the city's musical institutions. They are notably among the missing at all or most of the International Festival concerts. Some may be out of the city for the summer but others are not, and the suspicion of parochialism becomes a reality when murmurs are heard that the festival may be a threat to resident organizations.

Surely the fact that we have a thriving Conservatory and a symphony orchestra should give us a pride and confidence in our own maturity. And if that is so, how is it possible to slam the door on something that can only add to the musical distinction and richness of the city's life?

It is no compliment or vote of confidence to indicate by such actions and mutterings that our resident professional artists might suffer through the visitors' presence.

Those who feel that way do our institutions no favor and themselves a disservice by shunning contact with so many enriching musical experiences.

Festival climax nears

With the coming week Victoria concert-goers will be enjoying some final events in what has been, without doubt, the finest series of Victoria International Festival concerts in the eight-year history of the undertaking.

The glamorous climax to an orgy of chamber concerts, concerti extravaganzas and keyboard virtuoso concerts is of course the Opera Piccola presentation of Rossini's The Marriage Contract and Walton's The Bear.

These fully mounted and staged performances, directed by Pierette Alarie and accompanied by a 24-piece ensemble from the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra, will be performed on Tuesday and Wednesday (Aug.21 and 22) of the concluding week — both operas on both nights. William Shookhoff will conduct the performances, which will later tour the province and beyond.

Last year the Opera Piccola productions were indeed a crowning event, warmly received by big audiences at the McPherson Playhouse. The 1979 choices are melodious and comic, featuring singers from the voice program, some of whom have already been applauded in this week's concert presentations.

But before the operas bring down the 1979 curtain there are six more concerts which will include the last appearance Sunday of the splendid Trio Rouvier-Kantorow-Muller performing the Ravel trio concerto; the final Concerti Extravaganza event Monday, and the last Keyboard Opulence program on Saturday.

Sunday's concert at the McPherson is also of special interest for its inclusion of oboist Bert Lucarelli in two solo spots, and for the Pacific Winds' performance of Poulenc's Sextet in E flat Major, with Audrey Johannesen as pianist.

The concerto concert Monday will see the notable Canadian flutist Robert Aitken in a different role. He will be conducting the Summer Festival Orchestra in the Boccherini cello concerto, with solo artist Carol Morrow, and Vivaldi's Concerto for Four Violins Op.3 No.10 with soloists Daniel Heifetz, Sydney Humphreys, and Yuri and Dana Mazurkevich. Also on the program is Lucarelli performing Bach's Concerto for Oboe, Violin and String Orchestra, and Yuri Mazurkevich in the brilliant Saint-Saens Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso.

The highlight of Tuesday's program will be the teaming of two great artists, cellist Harvey Shapiro and pianist Mitchell Andrews in a Bach Adagio and Brahms' Sonata in E minor. Thursday at St.Michael's brings back the Philadelphia String Quartet playing Ravel, the University of Victoria Faculty Ensemble, and new piano duettists Inna Perkis and Boris Zarankin performing a Schumann work.

Different climate: Different tactics

It is all because of the climate. People who have spent years on the Prairies and in Eastern Canada move to B.C. because of the climate.

They arrive here and see all the plants, flowers, fruits and vegetables that can be grown because of the climate.

So they take up gardening and soon discover that gardening on the West Coast is quite different from gardening where they have spent most of a lifetime, because of the climate.

The recognized practice of starting the garden on the 24th of May and putting it to bed in September just doesn't work. Our gardens, like young children, never want to go to bed because of the climate.

Shrubs and trees are not pruned in the fall. Perennials and bulbs are not protected with mulches. No fertilizer is given to permanent plants in the fall, and watering is gradually decreased during August because of the climate.

Climate is quite different from weather. Weather is the day to day atmospheric conditions. Here those conditions can change rapidly.

Climate is the long-time average of those daily changes.

For example: The highest and lowest temperatures in any month will be on different dates from year to year. One year a month starts hot and ends cold, another year it may start cold and end hot.

These differences have a great effect on plant growth, but the climate for the month averages within a degree or so each year.

The over-all climate here is characterized by windy, cool springs with cold wet soil that keeps growth tediously slow; warm dry summers with cool nights that give a fine display of flowers and demand careful attention to watering and feeding; beautiful fall weather with color continuing until the rains begin; mild wet winters that turn any mulch-protected plant into compost; and the occasional outbreak of Arctic air, cold enough to severly damage plants not properly hardened in the fall.

The hardening of all our plants has to be accomplished in the warm, dry days of August, and that is why we must decrease the water to lessen the amount of new growth that is made. On the other hand we must never let the plants suffer from drought.

In the brief winter cold spells many of our plants will need temporary protection, but that protection must never smother the plants nor must it remain to coddle the plants when the cold wave has passed. Yet it must be ready to apply at an hour's notice, because of the climate.

No pruning of fruit or ornamental trees, or shrubs or climbers, is done in the fall. To do so would encourage new growth to be made in the mild wet weather which persists until Christmas, and that new growth will be easily killed in a cold spell during January.

Fruit trees are pruned in late February after the severest of the winter weather has passed.

Shrubs and trees which flower in summer or fall are pruned in late March or early April; while those which flower in spring are pruned as soon as the majority of flowers have faded, before the new growth commences. We have to keep to these pruning schedules because of the climate.

Fruit trees are fed at pruning time in late February. Any food the tree receives later, even from fertilizer on a lawn, has no effect on this year's crop, but does encourage long unneeded growth and excessive foliage which in turn delays the maturing and ripening of the fruit and severely decreases its storage life.

Shrubs are fed in March to stimulate spring growth, but annuals, vegetables, late summer and fall perennials are fed according to their needs throughout the growing season.

Care is needed to see that the food given to them does not reach the roots of permanent plants, those trees and shrubs which persist above ground over winter.

The fertilizer applied to the permanent plants in spring must reach the roots and be completely used during summer, hence our careful attention to watering so that food will be in a solution the plants are able to pick up.

Any fertilizer left in the soil will become available to the roots when the rainy season starts around October, causing a spurt of new growth in the mild weather. This is a condition we assiduously try to avoid.

Because of the climate our lawns require feeding little and often. The artificial watering necessary during our dry summers, and the heavy rains over winter, wash all soluble nutrients far beyond the reach of the shallow rooting grass plants.

The minimum fertilizing schedule for lawns is a complete lawn fertilizer, compounded for coastal soils, applied at the beginning of April, June and September, with a supplement of sulphate of ammonia in May, July and August, all treatments 30 days apart.

We have a climate we thoroughly enjoy, a climate that others envy, but that same climate causes us to use different gardening tactics from those used elsewhere, and when newcomers see that we do they are sure the climate must affect our minds.

Our way of gardening is dictated by the climate of the area, and many of our gardening problems are the result of not understanding and cooperating with the climate. It is because of the climate we do so many strange things.

GARDENING

Work for week

Normally by second week of August, watering of trees, shrubs, needs decreasing to aid maturing of summer growth. This dry summer, be governed by temperatures. If soil at roots has been maintained damp, light water misting of foliage may be enough on days of low humidity. Be aware this year of weather changes.

Removal of fading flowers aids in keeping plants in production. Water those flowering perennials which are still to bloom in fall.

Another cutting of culinary herbs will be possible for drying. Make the cutting around noon after morning dew has completely dried. It has been surprising to find quite a heavy moisture layer on grass and plants in early mornings this month.

Second sowing of peas and beans need constant dampness at roots and almost daily picking to continue production into September.

Earth up and then water leeks and celery.

Warning on Canning Yellow and other Low-acid tomatoes — can only with pressure canner because of low acidity. Documented cases of botulism have occurred by canning with usual water-bath method.

Freighter sinks

NEW DELHI (AP). — A Taiwanese cargo ship sank in rough seas in the Bay of Bengal, United News of India reported.

Hydro staff queried on poison comment

VANCOUVER (CP) — Agriculture Minister James Hewitt has ordered an internal investigation of reports that a British Columbia Hydro supervisor told Upper Squamish Valley residents that their children could play with Tordon 10K which are labelled hazardous.

Bill Coutts, Hydro rights-of-way supervisor, admitted in an interview he told residents in the valley about 60 kilometres northwest of Vancouver "it was unlikely any harm would come from this (children playing with pellets)."

John Sexton, a spokesman for the Crown corporation, said Thursday, Hewitt, who is also a Hydro director, questioned Hydro staff about an article in a Vancouver newspaper Wednesday which carried Coutt's admission. He said Hewitt will be issuing a statement concerning the matter.

Researchers in the United States say Tordon 10K, a pesticide Hydro was using to control brush, may cause cancer and birth defects. A federally-registered label on packages of the chemical specifically states it should be kept away from children and that it could be harmful if swallowed.

Stuart Craig, an officer with the provincial pesticide control branch, said Thursday, a Hydro supervisor may have lied on a permit application for the Upper Squamish Valley.

When the corporation first applied to use the chemical in the valley, it said domestic water supplies may be nearby and the application was turned down by Bain Vance, branch head, on January 29.

Coutts later wrote the branch and said the corporation had checked the area and found no domestic water supply was involved in the area where Hydro wanted to apply the chemical.

"Hydro made the claim that they'd checked out the area and Mr. Vance took their word for it," Craig said. "The two statements are contradictory; it would appear he made the first statement without checking the area.

No branch inspector was sent out to the area to verify Hydro's claim and Vance granted the permit May 8, on the basis of Coutt's letter.

Application of the chemical began on property owners' land in the area June 25 but was later shifted to another area after 25 families, who have wells in the area angrily protested the area was frequented by children and available to open-range cattle.

Spraying of the other area, an Indian reservation, started July 4, but was halted by the band three days later.

"This will make us very cautious in the future on applications made by Hydro," said Craig. "We have no way of knowing whether this is a deliberate attempt to get the project going on Mr. Coutts' part or an oversight — it would appear they lied to us up to a point."

Cat-tail root really tasty

WASAGAMING, Man. (CP) — Naturalists at Riding Mountain National Park in western Manitoba are holding regular cookouts this summer, but hotdogs and hamburgers aren't on the menu.

Instead, park visitors with adventurous tastebuds can sample pineapple weed tea, boiled pond-lily root or fare made from other wild plants which grow in the area.

Nancy Matkowski and Cheryl Penny, naturalists at the park about 170 kilometres northwest of Winnipeg, said the project was planned to show visitors a variety of edible wild plants.

At a recent cookout the food drew a variety of responses.

"It's pretty good," said Chris Newton as he munched on a salad of burdock, pigweed, plantain and young dandelion leaves. "I like greens of every kind."

He described a cat-tail root he was chewing as tasting "like a cross between a mushroom and an onion."

However, after sipping pineapple weed tea, 10-year-old Jenny Chalmers had a different reaction.

"Yuck, it's gross," she said with a grimace.

Ms. Matkowski and Ms. Penny said some plants, such as yellow pond-lily roots, require special preparation. Water used to boil the roots must be changed three times to remove their bitterness.

Visitor Carl Golebioski said he had was suprised at the number of plants that could be eaten.

"It goes to prove that if you do get lost, you can survive," he said.

The naturalists are careful to pick and prepare only harmless greens.

Fuel from manure

CALGARY (CP) — Attention energy-hungry world! A fuel made from manure for about 28 cents a gallon is flowing in a converted garage on the outskirts of Calgary.

The garage belongs to Wilbur Griffith and the product is methyl fuel, a substitute for heating oil, diesel fuel and, with refinements, perhaps gasoline.

The fuel is being produced in the pilot plant from animal and human manure and barley straw.

It has been produced by many others before, but no one has done it as quickly or cheaply as the process now controlled by Griffith and partner D. M. Grant.

Key to the process is an enzyme or catalyst which launches a cooking action that transforms the manure and waste into a clear, combustible liquid.

The catalyst was developed by two California scientists who have agreed to provide the enzyme to Griffith and Grant on a world-wide exlusive basis.

"It's everything we hoped for," said Gran after a sample of the liquid was analysed.

Since the initial story of the Griffith experiment three months ago, more than 350 individuals, corporations and governments have come to Griffith.

"To date we have been approached by people from all 10 Canadian provinces, 14 U.S. states, Italy, Austria, New Zealand, Israel, Tasmania, Switzerland, France, the U.K., Japan, China, Indonesia, Hong Kong and Taiwan," he says.

"They don't challenge us. They believe us. They want the plants as soon as possible."

Griffith expects that construction of a two-ton production unit will begin next week.

Griffith said a two-ton plant will sell for about $30,000.

Plant expanding

WINNIPEG (CP) — Versatile Manufacturing Co. in Winnipeg announced a $26-million expansion Thursday which will double its farm-implement production capacity.

The expansion will allow the company to increase its work force from 1,300 to 2,100 people by 1983.

Grit slams gov't

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Liberal leader said the provincial government is pressing ahead with heavy-oil and oil-sands development without regard for the property and lifestyles of residents in the Cold Lake and Fort McMurray areas.

Nick Taylor said the Progressive Conservative government should make sure that schools, hospitals, recreation facilities and support services are in place "before the big boom, not after."

Airport opened

PINECREEK, Minn. (AP) — A rare moment in aviation history occurred Saturday when an airport runway which crosses between two countries was officially opened.

Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon and Minnesota Governor Al Quie were on hand for the ceremony which marked the end of seven years work by local residents on both sides of the Canada-United States border.

Master plan

OLDS, Alta. (CP) — A five-year master plan requesting $9 million from the provincial gnvernment to renovate and expand Olds College has been submitted to the department of advanced education.

Dramatic discovery controls calf scours

Farming Report

By Leo Quigley

Typhoid, smallpox, polio, scarlet fever — a few of the diseases that have decimated mankind throughout history.

Finding miracle drugs to supress these devastating maladies has been heralded far and wide as being among science's greatest achievements.

But when scientists make a major breakthrough in controlling a disease that plagues animals the headlines are rare, even though the hours of laboratory work and dedication are just as great.

While these miracle drugs may not save human lives, they save the animals that put food on mankind's table and also save millions of dollars for livestock producers.

So, while a new vaccine to control calf scours may never make the headlines, the news of such a breakthrough by researchers in Saskatoon is just as important to cattlemen as a new cure for cancer.

Scours, or neonatal diarrohea, costs Canadian cattlemen and dairy producers an estimated $40 million annually. In fact, 27 per cent of calves born to heifers and 14 per cent of calves born to older cows develop scours within the first 30 days of life.

Most seriously hit are baby calves under a week old. The disease dehydrates and weakens them. They usually die.

The vaccine developers, the Veterinary Infectious Disease Organization, conducted a three-year survey which showed that calves in 61 per cent of all Canadian herds are hit by scours year after year. In fact, 91 percent had an outbreak of the disease at least once during the test period.

The new vaccine, which has proven dramatically effective in controlling the disease, will be manufactured by Connaught Laboratories Ltd. in Willowdale, Ont., the Canadian lab that took another miracle drug, insulin, and mass produced it for millions of diabetics.

Unlike insulin, the new vaccine isn't given directly to the patient. Instead, the scours vaccine is given to the mother prior to calving and the antibodies are passed along to the calf in her milk.

Once mass production of the vaccine is under way at Connaught it will be distributed to cattlemen through veterinarians. It is expectd that government regulations will permit cattlemen and dairy producers to inject the vaccine themselves.

The next step will be to begin licensing the vaccine in other cattle-producing countries, including the United States.

For the Veterinary Infectious Disease Organization — once on the verge of bankruptcy — the discovery has meant international recognition.

It has also proven that a research institution that receives direct input from livestock producers and carries out practical, producer-oriented research with support from all segments of the industry, can and does work in Canada.

10% drop seen in grain exports

CALGARY (CP) — A spokesman for the Alberta Wheat Pool says early estimates show slow grain deliveries a drop of 10 per cent in exports for the 1978-79 crop year.

Many farmers stand to lose a lot of money, Terry Harasym said in an interview.

Aug. 1 is usually the date by which farmers must sell their grain to be eligible for year-end bonuses paid by the Canadian wheat board. But this year, the board agreed to consider sales made beyond the deadline.

Harasym said this was presumably because of low grain sales during the last year.

The gloomy picture reflects general problems in the grain transportation system and labor troubles in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Thunder Bay, he said.

Farmers in southern Alberta have problems of their own — a shortage of water.

"A lot depends on what happens between now and harvest time. . . . Whatever happens, I think they can expect to have reduced yields."

Lost boy 'having a ball' camping

EDMONTON (CP) — Bobby Hamelin's two-day camping trip ended abruptly Thursday when police dogs found him in a ravine in the northeast party of the city.

Bobby, 9, hadn't bothered to tell his mother he was going away for a while.

He was staying in a tent with a man, woman and three children who had found a pleasant, if illegal, camping spot in the thickly wooded area.

"He suddenly found some friends he was happy with and just stayed with them and didn't bother going home," said city police Det. Oliver Auzins. "He was having such a good time he decided to stay, I guess."

The father of the three other children, identifying himself only as Doug, said Bobby showed up Tuesday evening and didn't want to go home. Doug said he let the boy stay rather than see him wander off into the ravine after dark.

Bobby decided to stay a second night and Doug, camping without a radio, never knew the boy was the object of a search.

Bobby was "having a ball and didn't comprehend he should go home," Auzins said.

Police had brought city work crews out to search in sewers leading toward the ravine. They were about to bring out a 30-man search party from a minimum-security jail in the city.

Kennedale Ravine, a large gully leading down to the North Saskatchewan River, is full of caves and old mine shafts.

Bobby was taken home safely. His mother refused comment on the affair except to say, "He is home."

Weddings

Wormald — Grant

On September 1, 1978 at approximately 10:25 p.m., Ron Wormald proposed marriage to Gayden Grant, 4200 feet above Victoria, in a twin engine Apache airplane which he had chartered for that very purpose. Her answer was a definite yes.

A beautiful double ring ceremony united them in marriage on June 23, 1979; Gayden Stacey being the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs Howard R. Grant, and 2nd Lieutenant Ron William Wormald being the youngest son of Lt. Cmdr. and Mrs. Ray Wormald, Victoria. The wedding took place at 5:30 p.m. in the Oak Bay United Church, Reverend Geoffrey G. Smith officiating.

The bride and her father entered the church to the trumpet tune by Purcell. She wore an elegant gown of rose point lace over taffeta, with medieval neckline and fitted bodice embroidered with pearls. The skirt and full train swept back from the waist and were bordered with a pleated deep flounce. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion with lace border misted from a lace Juliet cap embroidered with pearls. Her bouquet was of pink roses, accented with stephanotis and baby's breath, with trailing rose spirals. She wore a silver heart shaped locket, a gift from her groom.

Guests were greeted at the church by an Honour Guard consisting of eight of the groom's close friends; four naval officers from the NOTC (Esquimalt) in their CF dress uniforms, and four army personnel from the Canadian Scottish Regiment in full Highland dress. Officer Cadets M. Baker, J. Coates, M. Goodland and C. Preston represented the navy, while WO G. Hallam, Sgt. C. Russell and M/Cpls J. Appleyard and R. Evans represented the army.

The bride's attendants were Jackie Kyte, maid of honour, Rosalyn Wormald, sister of the groom, and Christine Costello, bride's niece from Chase, B.C. They wore identical blue floor-length gowns with blue lace bodice and sleeves. Their bouquets were pink and white daisies with baby's breath and trailing daisy spirals.

The groom looked smart in his RCN officers' mess kit. His best man was Mr. Gord Pigot and ushers were Mr. Rick Wormald, groom's brother, and Const. Rick Potts of Edmonton, Alberta. They wore matching deep blue tuxedos with velvet trim and white carnation boutonnieres.

During the signing of the register, the church was filled with the beautiful strains of the wedding song (There Is Love), sung in duet by the bride's sister, Mrs. Sheila Keehn and friend Mrs. Elaine McSorley, both of Prince Rupert, B.C. Organist was Mr. Robert Kroeger. Other out-of-town guests included Const. Ray Wormald (RCMP) of Hope, B.C., brother of the groom, and friends and relatives from Edmonton, Vancouver and Port Moody.

The dinner reception was held at the officers' wardroom, Naden, where the toast to the bride was given by Mr. Jim Lusse. After a wonderful honeymoon in Hawaii, the happy couple now reside in Victoria.

The bride was attended by Karen McDonnell as maid of honour, Lynn McDonnell and Brenda Freeman as bridesmaids, with Angela Price as flowergirl. Karen, Lynn and Brenda wore identical gowns of sky blue dotted swiss with small capes. Angela wore a soft pink chiffon dress. The bouquets were differnt mixtures of pink, blue and white carnations with baby's breath. The groom was attended by Peter Van Arkens as best man, with Fred LeCorre and Michael Smith as ushers. St. Paul's Anglican Church was the scene of a lovely double ring ceremony on June 16th, 1979, when Katherine Diane, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Brown, and Roland Brent, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Fenlon, exchanged vows.

The bride walked down the aisle on her father's arm wearing a fitted gown of white satin having lace inserts, accented with small pearl buttons, in the front and back bodices and cuffs. She carried a cascade of tangerine roses and stephanotis. The groom, wearing a tangerine rose boutonniere, was attired in a brown tuxedo. The maid of honour Doreen Brown, sister of the bride, and the bridesmaids Sandi Der and Lorena Green, wore floor length gowns of beige and tangerine. They carried identical bouquets of tangerine carnations and stephanotis with carnations in their hair. The best man, Wayne Brewster, and the ushers Bryan Green and Daryl Brewster, wore matching brown tuxedos.

Mr. Richard Reid was his brother's best man; the ushers were Mr. Eric Dunn, brother of the bride, and Mr. Lann Copeland. Miss Jane Samson, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

The wedding reception was held at the beautiful home and gardens of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Chard, on Pemberton Road. Mr. Chard gave the toast to the bride. Telegrams from London, England; Switzerland, New Zealand and Rhodesia were read.

CITY WATCHDOG RICHARDS Question #2. What well known street with a very heavy flow of traffic in Downtown Victoria does not have one painted traffic lane arrow for over one mile? Yet within half a block of the Police Station you can find eight arrows in less that 1/10 of a mile on Fisgard Street. These arrows appear to Your City's Watchdog to guide Police vehicles to and from the Police Station. Therefore in the interest of safe driving, members of City Council should read on page 38 of The British Columbia Guide to Safe Driving, Entitled Diagram of Pavement Markings and What They Mean, and on page 9, Road Test Requirements #4, Use proper lanes for making turns. Postscript: In future these questions will appear in Saturday's Colonist and Saturday's Times. Your City's Watchdog C. Joe Richards, 383-6259.

309 IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory my dear son Victor, who passed away Aug. 11, 1974, and all my loved ones.
This month comes back with deep regret,
It brings back a day I will never forget,
You fell asleep without a goodbye,
But memories of you will never die.
There is a corner in my heart especially kept for you,
As long as life and memory last, I will remember you.
Always loved and remembered
Mum.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Ecuador installs Roldos

QUITO (AP) — Jaime Roldos took office Friday as Ecuador's first elected president in nine years, and promised to lead the country in an orderly transition to democracy from dictatorship.

Roldos, a 38-year-old populist who won a landslide victory in last April's elections, said his government would seek improvements in social justice and economic development.

"I have offered no miracles, I am not offering miracles now and the country should not expect miracles," Roldos said in his inaugural speech in the Legislative Palace.

"The country can expect a just and democratic change," he said.

Roldos, whose campaign slogan was "the force of change," said more than one million voters have endorsed his platform.

Representatives from more than 40 countries were on hand for Roldo's inauguration.

Ecuador is the second South American country to end a military dictatorship this week. Walter Guevara Arze was inaugurated as president of Bolivia on Wednesday, ending 15 years of military rule in that country.

Capri safety queried

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. transportation department said today there may be safety defects in several components of 1971-1974 and 1976-1978 Capris imported from West Germany by the Ford Motor Co. and that its investigation could lead to a recall of 420,000 of these autos.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration scheduled a public meeting here Sept. 18 to give Ford an opportunity to present its views on the finding.

NHTSA said these components are subject to failure: front seat-backs in 1971-1974 models, headlight switches in 1971-1972 models and floor-mounted gear shift levers in 1971-1974 and 1976-1978 models with manual transmissions.

The agency said it has received more than 100 reports of the failure of the backs of the reclining front bucket seats, causing accidents in three cases, loss of vehicle control in seven others and nine injuries. Investigators said a weld is missing in the reclining mechanism of the seat.

NHTSA reported the light switch problem generally occurs because the switch falls apart when turned on or off, causing electrical failure of head, parking, sidemarker, licence, instrument panel and tail lamp circuits. It said it has received no reports of accidents, but it has learned of 160,000 replacement parts sold for the 145,000 imported Capris involved.

Accept PLO or no oil?

LONDON (Reuter) — Persian Gulf Arab oil producers are prepared to discuss long-term oil supplies for the European Economic Community only if the nine-country EEC is willing to discuss the Middle East conflict, Arab diplomats said Friday.

They said the discussion might cover the possible recognition of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The diplomats said France and Kuwait are representing the two sides in initial contacts which both sides hope would lead to a ministerial meeting, probably in Paris.

Western sources said the French initiative received guarded support from other EEC states but some, such as Britain and the Netherlands, are trying to limit the talks to energy only.

And in Damascus, Palestinian leaders headed by Yasser Arafat, chief of the PLO, open a major policy debate in the Syrian capital today.

Arafat and his colleagues in the 55-member Palestine Central Council meet against the background of strained relations between Israel and two of its most important allies — the United States and West Germany.

Israel has been alarmed by what it regards as American and German overtures to the PLO, including lengthy meetings between West German leaders and Arafat.

Although the Palestinians have followed the dispute with barely-concealed satisfaction, the debate here is certain to reflect deep suspicion over U.S. motives in offering talks with the PLO if it accepts Israel's right to exist.

A compromise which would allow the Palestinians to do so without losing face is due to be discussed later this month by the UN Security Council.

A resolution drafted by Kuwait, the only Arab state currently on the Security Council, would reaffirm UN Resolution 242 — which implicitly recognizes Israel's right to exist — and endorse the PLO's long-standing demand for the right to establish an independent state.

29 N-plants given orders

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The closing last March of five nuclear plants because their plumbing wasn't built to withstand strong earthquakes has led to a finding that 29 other nuclear plants in the United States need better pipe supports.

Of the 29 plants surveyed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, 25 are operating plants and four are awaiting licences to begin operation. None of the 29 will be ordered to close, but all will be required to build up the supports around their piping to prevent rupture in case of an earthquake.

"What we're talking about here is strengthening pipe supports so the pipes won't start swinging in an earthquake," Darrell Eisenhut, acting director of the NRC's division of operating reactors, said in an interview. "In many cases, we're finding that the piping is supported up instead of down, things like that."

Eisenhut said that the plant owners are strenghtening the pipe supports without being told to. He said that at least two plants, the Brunswick plant of Carolina Power £ Light Co. and the Pilgrim plant of Boston Edison Co., have been shut down while their owners strengthen their pipe supports.

Protester kills self

SEOUL (AP) — A woman killed herself early today as hundreds of South Korean riot police stormed an opposition political party headquarters occupied by about 200 woman protesting the loss of their jobs at a textile factory, authorities said.

Kim Kyong-soon committed suicide by slashing an artery in her left wrist as police charged the headquarters of the New Democratic party, Seoul Police Director Lee Sung-koo said.

Lee said about 20 persons, including policemen and several reporters, were injured in fighting that broke out as police hauled the women out of the building. Police detained 198 persons — 172 women and 26 New Democratic party members — for questioning, he said.

The women occupied the fourth-floor auditorium of the party headquarters last Tuesday in a sit-in to demand new jobs. They lost their jobs when the Y. H. Trading Co. went broke and closed its textile factory.

When the women moved in they said they chose the party headquarters because they did not believe police would raid it.

South Korea's authoritarian president, Park Chung-hee has outlawed all demonstrations and his government.

South Korean textile firms have laid off hundreds of workers in recent months because of a recession blamed in part on the government's tight-money policy and soaring world oil prices.

Kim Young-am, the newly elected New Democratic party chief, said the police raid was an "incredible" act of violence against his party and the women workers.

Week's trading gives BCRIC shares look of winners

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett's election goodie seems to have turned into a bonanza for optimists anticipating above-average returns from their shares in the British Columbia Resources Investment Corp.

Shares in BCRIC held their own and then some during their first week of stock market trading and now investors seem prepared to sit back and wait for the former Crown corporation to make its first major investment.

"The stock has gone from weak hands into strong hands this week," analyst Chuck Gage of Midland Doherty Ltd. said Friday. "Most of the selling was from the freebees and the gunslingers.

"The gunslingers borrowed money to get extra shares and they needed a quick return."

BCRIC's consistent success since the pre-election giveaway offer suggests that the premier tapped a Canadian passion for a sure thing.

BCRIC opened with a book value of $6 Tuesday on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Shares dipped slightly to $5⅞ the first day, but finished strongly at $6.10 on an initial turnover of 597,984 shares.

Trading was even higher Wednesday — BCRIC also appeared for the first time on the Toronto Stock Exchange — then began to decline Thursday. Friday's trading on the VSE was down to 172,220 shares.

Four days of trading produced a turnover of 2,070,435 shares and a closing price Friday of $6.30. Three days of trading in Toronto had a turnover of 279,200 shares and BCRIC closed Friday at $6⅜.

Although some shares were bought at cut rates in city taverns, there wasn't any indication of panic selling at the market level.

"BCRIC has traded at a premium," said Gage. "It looks like an excellent investment down the road and people will do well with it."

A report released during the week by Pemberton Securities Ltd. said BCRIC's asset value will total $786.6 million this year, with an estimated 96.3 million shares.

Prior to the free share offer, BCRIC had assets of $151 million from investments which included an 81 per cent holding in Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., plus total ownership of Kootenay Forest Products Ltd. and Plateau Mills Ltd. The corporation also owns 10 per cent of the shares in Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd.

David Helliwell, corporation president, was naturally delighted with the initial market response, but cautioned that BCRIC isn't likely to rush into making a quick investment decision.

"It could be six months, maybe longer," said Helliwell.

Helliwell said it was obvious that the vast majority of shareholders were in for the long term. The president also was encouraged by indications that B.C. residents were "buying even more shares."

Robert Scott, president of the VSE, was relieved that the opening of trading went smoothly after some analysts had predicted a lower opening price than the $6 book value (established by dividing the number of shares into the company's assets).

There seemed to be a balanced tug of war between buyers and sellers as neither dominated.

Besides its interest in Crown corporations like Canadian Cellulose, BCRIC also owns 2.3 million acres of untapped land in northern B.C., believed to contain considerable oil and gas reserves.

Gage believes BCRIC maybe interested in purchasing the assets of Pacific Petroleum from Petro-Can.

Kitimat turns 25 but still has growing pains

KITIMAT (CP) — Twenty-five years old now, Kitimat still has growing pains while fighting off the stagnation of premature old age.

The town, hewed out of the rock, swamp and rain forest that defines wilderness along British Columbia's central coast, was one of Canada's first planned single-industry towns.

It was built to house employees of the Alcan smelter which opened in 1954, and its population was originally intended to grow to about 50,000.

However weak world markets and the trend toward smaller operations slowed Alcan's expansion plans. Kitimat's population now hovers around 13,000, but that doesn't stop local officials from dreaming glorious dreams of the boom years ahead.

"This is where it's going to happen," says Mayor George Thom, looking ahead at the good times and prosperity that a pipeline, a deep-water harbor or industrial expansion would bring, if only one of them ever got off the ground.

Thom, the first Kitimat mayor who has never worked for Alcan, has a long list of companies who've expressed interest in the flat land, power and access to the sea that Kitimat has to offer.

"There've been all sorts of businesses which were going to come in but something always goes wrong at the last minute," he says. "Every major company in the world seems to have looked at Kitimat.

"It's going to happen. When it happens depends only on world markets."

Multi-colored squares and blotches on the maps tacked on council chamber walls chart the dreams. Proposed industrial sites pock the Kitimat River Valley and potential pipeline, ferry and dock facilities are outlined along the waterfront.

But, as Thom says, something always goes wrong. The Kitimat Pipeline Ltd., proposal to build a line to move Alaskan oil from a port here to Edmonton is a dead letter, at least for the moment.

Prince Rupert, not Kitimat, is the northern B.C. port that has found favor with both provincial and federal governments.

But Adrian Jones, city administrative assistant, says the area will see slow industrial growth in its hinterlands that will force waterfront development and rail line upgrading.

"Nobody's flocking into the area expecting things to happen right away," he says. "It's slow, but it will happen."

Controlled growth is the kind most locals favor. It benefits them, not a horde of outsiders. It decreases the chance of environmental damage.

"Boom," they remind you, is a word that comes from "down south" in Vancouver and Victoria.

That thinking explains why the oil pipeline met so much local opposition.

"The area itself," says one resident, "aside from getting supertankers and bars and whorehouses, would not benefit."

Officials feel Kitimat expansion will tie in with development of the whole central coast area and the resource-rich northern half of the province that it services.

"There's no way we can compete with Prince Rupert," says city manager Ben Dekleine, "but we do say 'don't put all your eggs in one basket'."

That's what Kitimat is trying to avoid — one basket.

Thom points to the Eurocan pulp mill, which employs about 1,200 — half as many as Alcan — and to city council's independence as evidence against the image of Kitimat as Alcan's company town.

But Alcan still pays more than half the town's tax bill, and company officials have occasional closed sessions with council to hammer out various problems. Alcan will be just as important in the town's future as it has been in its past.

There are constant rumors that Alcan — officially Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd. — plans to expand, partly to take advantage of the power it could generate at its Kemano powerhouse with water rights that it will surrender if they are not used by 1995.

Company spokesman Brian Hemingway says Alcan, which also has four smelters in Quebec, is always considering such possibilities, but the only current project is a program to repaint and replace much of the original equipment.

"A lot of people still have an image of Alcan as a brand-new plant and of Kitimat as a shining new city, but in fact they're both 25 years old now," he says.

One reason for Alcan's reluctance to expand is the current belief that a bigger smelter would be unmanageable. That reasoning comes at least in part from the company's labor relations in the last few years.

Representatives of the company and the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers now are at odds over how to conduct an environmental health study to follow up a controversial union-backed study that reported lung and bone diseases among workers.

The union still is paying off a $130,000 damage suit assessed against it after an 18-day wildcat strike in 1976 which saw police and workers clash on picket lines.

"You see that thing showing up on your financial statement," says union president Ernie Pegley, "and it keeps people remembering."

Hemingway, however, says labor relations have improved, pointing as proof to co-operation in implementation of new technology, a declining turnover rate and the return of sons and daughters to work for Alcan.

A bigger smelter would also mean more potential environmental problems. Though it is hard to get proof, local Indians blame smelter effluents for the lack of fish in the Kitimat Arm and the Douglas Channel proper.

And acres of dead trees scar the hillside behind the smelter, a problem that Alcan maintains was caused by insects rather than by fumes from its operations.

Despite the problems, Kitimat has managed to establish a more stable atmosphere than most single-industry towns and gets good reviews from town planners.

In a recent issue of Vancouver Urban Reader, Ann Kloppenborg writes:

"Still, in spite of its difficulties, Kitimat has achieved its main goal: It is a good place for families and it is a much better place to live than the company towns of earlie times."

THE WHEEL THING is a combination tricycle-lawnchair which Vancouver's Roi Kelly assembled as a summer project from parts made in school. Roi's contraption caught the eye of bathers recently as he pedalled along a waterfront path.

Press gang eyed for fire fighting

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial forest protection branch has an ace up its sleeve which it hesitates to use in combating about 450 forest fires in tinder-dry British Columbia.

It's called conscription, something which hasn't been necessary for about 20 years, but still is contained in the Forest Act.

But with the worst fire season this decade, conscription could be just around the corner, which would make a cool sip of beer in an Interior pub almost like playing with fire.

Don Owen, head of the provincial branch, said Friday he doesn't want to conscript forest fire fighters, but he may be forced to take desperate measures as men tire and machinery isn't properly maintained.

"The last time I can recall it (conscription) was done was in the late 1950s when they cleared the pubs around Boston Bar to fight some fires in the (Fraser) canyon," said Owen.

"Since then we've tried to steer away from it, but if we get into really desperate straits, we'll get into it."

The province hasn't had a major rainfall since early July and the situation is explosive, said Owen, because a brisk wind for just a couple of hours would spread existing fires quickly.

Owen said about 2,000 men and 24 water bombers were engaged in a desperate battle to contain existing fires and about 50 new blazes are reported each day. The total has remained constant at about 450.

He said the active fires were being contained by surrounding fire breaks and are under constant surveillance.

Mike Apsey, deputy forests minister, said men have been moved from the northern part of the province to the southern region. The Prairie provinces, Ontario, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories all have offered help, he said.

A fire-spotting aircraft crashed Thursday in the Finley Creek area near Cranbrook in Southeastern B.C. and sent two persons to hospital in Calgary.

Child abused? Call Zenith 1234

VANCOUVER (CP) — The human resources ministry Friday began operation of a 24-hour toll-free telephone number to report child abuse and neglect in British Columbia.

Human resources minister Grace McCarthy announced the start of the child abuse reporting program, estimated to cost $338,000, at a news conference.

"From anywhere in British Columbia, adults and children will be able to report situations of child abuse and neglect simply by calling the operator and asking for Zenith 1234," Mrs. McCarthy said.

During business hours, callers to the new Zenith line will be connected to the nearest human resources office. At other times, callers' information will be relayed immediately to human resources staff in the caller's area, she said.

56 impaireds grounded every day in Alberta

EDMONTON (CP) — Drinking and driving is a popular pastime in Alberta.

It's so popular, in fact, the provincial government suspended 10,292 drivers' licences belonging to Alberta motorists convicted of impaired driving during the first six months of this year.

That's an average of more than 56 suspensions every day for half a year.

And that's only the ones who got caught.

"We feel a large number of those who drive after drinking a lot are being apprehended," Jim Martyn, public affairs officer with the solicitor-general's office, said in an interview.

"But undoubtedly there are a lot of others."

The Criminal Code provides for jail terms and fines for those convicted of impaired driving.

Under Alberta legislation, all drivers convicted of driving under the influence automatically have their licences taken away for a minimum of six months, says Martyn.

That means if an Albertan is convicted in a court in B.C., the Alberta government will still automatically suspend his licence.

There are no exemptions.

However, that doesn't mean the person will park the car in the garage and leave it there.

A spokesman with the Alberta Alcoholism and Drug Abuse Commission says about half the persons forced to deal with the department because of suspended licences admit to driving illegally.

Martyn says government advertising campaigns and Checkstop have helped reduce the number of drunk drivers. Checkstop is a program started in 1954 and involves police setting up roadblocks and checking all traffic for signs of alcohol.

"We have found the campaign itself is having quite an effect on those who are in the habit of driving after drinking," Martyn says. "The fear of being apprehended is increasing."

"But it's hard to say how many we're keeping off the roads."

Statistics appear to indicate the problem is getting worse, not only in total numbers, but in percentages.

Multilingual station sought

OTTAWA (CP) The government agency which regulates broadcasting said Friday it has received an application for a multilingual AM radio station to serve Edmonton.

The agency, the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, said others wishing to file similar applications should do so before Sept. 14.

Date of a public hearing on applications would be announced later.

Until the current application is published in the Canada Gazette for public hearing, it is not public property and the applicant cannot be identified, a commission spokesman said.

Shortage of kidneys

PRETORIA (Reuter) — South Africa is short of kidney donors because low speed limits and speeding fines of up to $2,200 have caused a sharp drop in road fatalities, a hospital superintendent said Tuesday. He said since the introduction in June of 70 kilometre-an-hour speed limits and the high fines, road casualties had been reduced by more than half.

NAMEGAME No. 4

OFFICIAL ENTRY FORM BELOW!

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Lush piano tone charms senses

AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Once more this week, an International Festival concert demonstrated the comprehensive and altogether satisfying talent of pianist Robin McCabe.

It does not matter how often one hears this intelligent and radiant artist, the experience is always a refreshment that charms the senses. She has something special to say to her audience each time she approaches the keyboard.

In a program mostly devoted to the baroque period, McCabe played Ravel's Gaspard de la Nuit, a set of three "poemes pour piano" which provides the performer with a fascinating range of iridescent tonal color and wide yet subtle deployment of moods.

With her command of a brilliant musical vocabulary, her loving attention to the finest detail and lush yet disciplined technique, McCabe is a definitive interpreter of the evocative, highly literate music of French impressionism.

The balance of the program for this concert was devoted to duo performance.

First the Duo Geminiani, which consists of Philadelphia Quartet first violinist Stanley Ritchie, and harpsichordist Elisabeth Wright.

They performed sonatas for violin and continuo by 17th century composers — Ritchie playing on a restored baroque violin of the 17th century.

The performance was both delicate and sparkling with vitality.

An effective contrast and a master-stroke in program planning was the following tonally opulent Ravel, which was then followed by the duo of double bass and harpsichord. The artists were of course, Gary Karr and Harmon Lewis.

The happy and always successful blending of the deep-throated notes of double bass with the crystal-thin sound of the harpsichord exploited a variety of moods.

Two encores were given in which Karr allowed the laughter to surface. The total effect was entirely one of an artist and his audience enjoying music together.

Karr, with his impeccable taste in the shaping of phrases and use of color and his virtuosic command of the huge violin, both as to bowing and fingering, is without doubt one of a few uniquely great artists on today's concert platform. The rare duo partnership with Lewis, makes that fact all the more apparent.

'Near-anarchy' shuts Harmac

Times News Services

Irate forest industry tradesmen from three unions were off the job Friday at some British Columbia sawmills, plywood mills and pulp mills to press their demands for higher wage revisions.

At MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac pulp mill, the 24-hour study session turned into a full-scale walkout.

Brian Smith, the company's industrial relations officer, said "a mixture of dissident employees" set up an information picket line Friday afternoon when they discovered that company supervisors had replaced tradesmen involved in the study session.

Workers scheduled for the afternoon shift did not show up for work and the company began shutting down the plant, Smith said.

"The information picket line has no sanction and we were almost in a situation of anarchy," he said.

Stan Shewaga, president of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers (PPWC), Local 8, said the members who set up the picket line were acting on their own accord, but the union executive will attempt to resolve the dispute.

"The principal thing is that supervisors are not going to take jobs that belong to hourly paid workers," he said.

Smith said, however, that Harmac had "no option but to perform essential maintenance jobs to prevent layoff of production employees."

The irate PPWC tradesmen joined tradesmen from the International Woodworkers of America and the Canadian Paperworkers Union in walking off the job at mills along the coast and in the Interior as far north as Prince George.

The shutdown at Harmac, which will idle 1,500 workers, comes only seven days after the plant reopened following a three-week strike by the PPWC.

Ferry union votes strike

Times News Services

While bus drivers, fishermen and oil truckers are settling contract disputes, one group of workers is threatening to inconvenience everyone on Vancouver Island.

B.C. ferry workers have voted in favor of a strike.

However, no job action will be taken by the 26-member union while negotiations with the B.C. Ferry Corp. continue with the assistance of mediator Fred Geddes, union president Shirley Mathieson said Friday. Talks are scheduled to resume Monday.

Mathieson said the central issue is wages.

A lengthy ferry strike during the summer months would seriously harm B.C.'s tourist industry, and the provincial government would probably have to consider using its essential services legislation to order the workers back on the job.

The ferry corporation has had a tough time this month with fuel supplies running low after a Teamsters strike at three B.C. refineries cut deliveries of diesel fuel.

But Teamsters have reached tentative agreement with Imperial Oil, which expects to resume full deliveries next week.

Contract talks are continuing at the other two struck oil companies, Chevron Canada and Gulf Oil.

Meanwhile, B.C. Hydro's 3,000 bus drivers, mechanics and maintenance personnel in Vancouver and Victoria have voted 73 per cent in favor of accepting a two-year contract.

The contract, retroactive to April 1, will provide for wage increases of 15 per cent.

Al Ashton, Amalgamated Transit Union president, said the increase will raise a bus drivers's pay to $11.37 an hour as of April 1, 1981, and a mechanic's wage to $13.48 an hour.

And in the fishing industry, B.C.'s 4,000 shoreworkers, represented by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, have voted by a 2-to-1 margin to accept the tentative contract agreement hammered out last weekend.

Little boy lost . . . and found

By PAUL MINVIELLE
Times Staff

He was a cute little kid, even through the smudged dirt on his face. He was crying and the man walking out of the restaurant after his Friday lunch just couldn't pass the waif by.

He asked the youngster where he lived, and together they set off in one indicated direction. Four blocks down, the boy decided he didn't live that way after all.

Back to square one, which in this case was the James Bay Square at Menzies and Simcoe.

A few false starts and several blocks of walking later and rescuer and lost boy found themselves in Tex's Grill, a neighborhood restaurant tucked in behind the Legislative Buildings at Menzies and Superior.

Owner Russ Kraft agreed with the rescuer that the police should be called, but he thought an ice cream cone might be in order beforehand. Lost boy agreed, but he didn't talk at all. He just sat and nodded, especially when anyone said ice cream (left) or chips.

Then Constable Bob Stiff arrived, and seconds later the boy was being put in the front seat of the police cruiser. The lost boy didn't like that one bit. He scrambled from the car and threw himself into the arms of the man who had found him (right).

Stiff asked the rescuer for his name.

"Terry Segarty," the man replied.

Occupation?

"I'm an MLA," replied the Socred member for Kootenay.

And so, although he had to get to Qualicum to pick up his son, and despite the fact he was facing a 12-hour drive back to Cranbrook, the MLA gathered the boy in his arms and they went for a ride in the cruiser.

It was one of those fair days when fortune smiled on lost boys and MLAs and busy policemen. A woman at James Bay Square recognized the boy and knew where he lived.

Minutes later, Yarrow, three years old and no longer a lost little boy, was in the arms of his mother, Jan Christie. She had thought the boy was playing with his sister, Jennie, 7, in the back of the family's apartment at 132 Menzies. But when Jennie came in for lunch, Yarrow had decided to go off and see a bit of the world.

After all, a boy never knows what important people he'll run into or what people will give him — especially if he's a cute little kid.

Senior servants move on

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four senior civil servants under the British Columbia government's consumer and corporate affairs ministry have resigned or have been moved to new positions.

Bill Irwin, the province's senior administrator of securities, real estate and insurance is taking early retirement from his government job to join the Vancouver Stock Exchange as executive assistant to president Robert Scott, effective Oct. 1.

Other senior civil servants who have left the ministry include Keith Saddlemyer, assistant deputy minister who will join the treasury board in Victoria; Ken Stevenson, who will become head of the Saskatchewan Securities Commission, and Don Anderson, deputy superintendent of brokers who will move to another department.

Some sources have suggested the moves were made because of internal problems in the ministry and the appointment of former RCMP administrator Peter Bazowski as deputy minister.

However, Jim Nielsen, consumer and corporate affairs minister, said the four are simply moving to better jobs and it is mere coincidence that they are all leaving at the same time.

Tug crews find fortune afloat

ABERDEEN, Scotland (CP) — Fifteen crew members serving three Scottish tugs may have salvaged themselves a fortune by taking under tow an abandoned vessel loaded with 28,000 tons of Canadian iron ore.

They believe their share of the payout from this operation could be as much as £2 million ($5 million Canadian.)

A British Admiralty official says that the crew of the Liberian-registered Vida abandoned ship off the north of Scotland during thick fog.

While the 26 Spanish sailors from the Vida were taken to the mainland by lifeboats, three tugs from Scapa Flow in the Orkney Islands took the drifting vessel into tow.

Pressure to ban fishermen from key ferry channels

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The B.C. Ferries Corporation will ask the provincial government to pressure federal officials into restricting small fishing boats from using both Active Pass and Horseshoe Bay.

A source within the corporation told the Times today the boats at both locations have always been a matter of grave concern. The grounding of the Queen of Alberni on a reef in Active Pass Thursday has finally tipped the scales in favor of demanding action.

He noted that under the Canada Shipping Act, the federal ministry of transport can restrict or ban fishing at locations that are deemed hazardous to shipping routes.

Although a preliminary investigation into the cause of the mishap hasn't been completed, corporation officials have indicated the small fishing boats were a factor.

The preliminary findings are expected to be made public early next week, but much depends on the outcome of a transport ministry investigation which is being carried out separately.

The placing of a ban would undoubtedly generate a wave of protest from boaters who regard the pass and the bay as prime salmon fishing spots.

But some boaters, such as Horst Klein of North Pender Island suggest the government may have no other choice.

"You'll always get some guy who thinks the ferry can react in the same way as his little boat can," said Klein.

He said restricting fishing may be the answer but the only reason for taking that action is the lack of tough enforcement to get boaters to observe shipping rules.

"The RCMP has boats out there but I don't think they are tough enough. If it was me I'd fine the guy $500 if he didn't move over when a ferry came through. And if he was caught doing it again, I'd lock him up."

Meanwhile, the Alberni arrived at the Burrard-Yarrows drydock in North Vancouver around midnight, partly under tow and partly under its own steam.

Tot swept from cougar's jaws

PORT HARDY (CP) — The quick action of a broom-brandishing woman saved a four-year-old girl from being carried off by cougar that had the child clutched in its jaws.

Constable Norm Usher, of the RCMP detachment here, said that Mary Loewen's attack scared the cougar into dropping Eva Walkus uninjured.

The cougar stalked the girl at the Tsulquate Indian reserve while she was playing with Ernie Walkus, 6, at a group home supervised by Loewen.

Usher said the cougar grabbed the girl off the swing and dragged her about four feet toward the bush by the house.

"It's a good thing it was suppertime and the woman came out of the house to call the youngsters to eat," Usher said. "If she hadn't seen the cougar it probably would have got away with the child."

The tot was treated for shock at the hospital here and given rabies shots before being released.

"The teeth marks of the cougar did not pierce her skin," Usher said. "It didn't get a chance to chew on her."

New PNE pact in union court

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiators for the Pacific National Exhibition and the union representing 600 exhibition employees hammered out a revised contract proposal after a five-hour bargaining session Friday night.

PNE spokesman Bill Joiner said the executive of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, local 1004, has called a membership meeting for Sunday morning to present the proposal to its members. No details of the proposal were released.

Joiner said it was not known if the union negotiators would make any recommendation on the offer to the membership.

There had been fears that the PNE employees might go on strike this weekend, but Joiner said the union has assured the board it will not disrupt today's rock concert at Empire Stadium which is expected to attract more than 40,000 persons.

A major stumbling block was the union's demand for a cost-of-living clause in the first year of a two-year contract despite the fact that recent settlements between the same CUPE local and various Vancouver area municipalities do not include such a clause.

In the past, the union has always accepted identical agreements to those accepted by the municipalities, apart from local issues.

PNE president Erwin Swangard said the board was adamant about not including a cost-of-living clause in any agreement.

Minister scotches alcoholic centre

VANCOUVER (CP) — The city has been rebuffed in an attempt to have a facility designated for maintenance and treatment of chronic alcoholics.

The city proposed in a letter to Bert Hoskin, chairman of the Alcohol and Drug Commission, that new legislation be drafted giving the city power to set up the facility at which the alcoholic would receive food, shelter and health care, participate in a work program and receive counselling.

Compulsory committal for up to 90 days would be available.

However, Health Minister Bob McClelland's position, stated in a response from the commission, says that even though detoxification centres around the province are paid for and operated by the health ministry through the commission, "responsibility for the care of chronic alcoholics does not fall within the purview" of his ministry.

He did not suggest whose responsibility it is.

Doug Purdy, deputy director of the social planning department, said the response is "evasive, irresponsible and unhelpful."

He said the commission has denied any interest in maintenance of alcoholics, yet it has maintenance programs for drug addicts.

PACIFIC NATIONAL EXHIBITION

Rejected B.C. MD cools talk over split

VANCOUVER (CP) — A British Columbia doctor nominated for president of the Canadian Medical Association (CMA) and then defeated says he does not support a suggestion that the B.C. Medical Association (BCMA) split with the national body.

Several B.C. doctors have resigned from the group and a number have requested the BCMA's board of directors to call a referendum on whether the provincial group should pull out because the CMA snubbed provincial doctors when it rejected Dr. William Jory for president at its annual convention in Toronto in June.

Dr. William Thomas, a Vancouver obstretrician, was elected as president after being nominated from the floor at the last minute.

Ordinarily, the province which hosts the next convention — B.C. in this case — nominates the candidate who is then elected president.

Jory was the nominee elected by the BCMA's membership, but his reputation as a reformer appears to have led to his rejection.

"The other provinces weren't prepared (for Jory's approach)," said BCMA president Dr. Mel Petreman, who said Thomas was nominated by a Saskatchewan doctor.

Jory, who had the support of the BCMA's board of directors at the convention, said nothing would be achieved by the provincial group resigning from the national body.

Prison-death vigil

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — About 35 demonstrators gathered outside the British Columbia Penetentiary completed a 24-hour vigil and fast Friday night to mark the fourth National Prison Justice Day.

Claire Culhane, founder of the Vancouver-based Prisoners' Rights Group, said Aug. 10 is the day set aside by prisoners and their families and friends to protest against the number of prison suicides and deaths.

She said the vigil is held then because that is the date in 1974 when Edward Nalon died of a heart attack in his solitary confinement cell at Millhaven maximum security prison in Kingston, Ont.

Passing motorists honked their car horns and some passengers frowned at the demonstrators as they paraded in front of the century-old B.C. Pentitentiary.

Burnaby NDP MP Svend Robinson attacked the prison system as "a dumping ground" for young people. He criticized the lack of action taken on prison reform especially as many reports and studies on the penal system in Canada find faults with it.

The demonstrators called for a moratorium on prison construction and abolition of solitary confinement.

Other demands included retention of legislation that abolishes capital punishment, an end to excessive sentencing and prompt public inquests into prison deaths.
